EDITORIAL

They say the best comedy comes from the world around us, which I suppose explains the theme of this issue of the Toike. It's been a busy month for all of us, working hard to get back into some semblance of a routine after God knows how long of doing God knows what.

It's been a mess at times - I literally dropped a course in the middle of a meeting with faculty last week - but we keep going. It's not all bad though. I happen to be on the West coast, so while all of you Torontonians are stuck indoors, unable to go to the gym or watch movies, I'm still free to visit restaurants or go out with friends, so suck on that! Let's just ignore the fact that I haven't done any of those things and have been sitting alone at my desk since the last editorial I wrote.

Hope you're doing well!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Bread recipes?

The gluten offends me! Make them gluten-free! This is racist towards the gluten-intolerant. I am livid that the Toike has adopted a pro-Gluten agenda in my absence. God, what's next? Milk? MILK? FUCK YOU AND YOUR GLUTEN. GLUTEN HURTS ME. How could you? I LOVED YOU, YOU WERE THE CHOSEN ONE ANAKIN! And now... now you've gone and perverted this beautiful thing that I loved! I knew Parker was bad news! Bringing his west coast ideas, and gluten! Gosh. *Greta Thunberg Voice how dare you? I mean, seriously, not cool. Gluten is so dangerous. Heroin is safer. Now it's gluten, tomorrow it's lactose, then what? Is the Toike gonna be pro-protein? I'm sick of it! Absolutely sick of it! Anyway, hi guys!

- Leigh

Hi Leigh!

I thought this was the letter TO the editor, not from. Regardless, the Toike Oike maintains its pro-gluten stance. In fact, we love gluten so much we're looking into investing into a printing toaster so that we can print the Toike onto bread. We're also anti-soup now so don't get any ideas, Joanna.

Wishing you all the best,
- Parker

WRITE-ITORIAL

Hellloooo young Toikelings! How was school today? Did you enjoy the lunch I made for you? What's that? The other kids are making fun of you? Oh no, no. We can't have that! Listen kid, if I could teach you how to beat up the other kids and make Moltov cocktails then I would. But I can't, mainly because I've already been flagged by CSIS for my search history.

C'est la vie.

Listen! In all seriousness, we know that school is super tough and a flaming dumpster fire right now but stick with it! Be kind to yourself! Get enough sleep! Read The Toike Oike and laugh super hard (it'll make you feel better)!

In this issue we explore how our lives have all changed since Quarantine, err, I mean Quarantine, began. We have so many questions. Not only in regard to how the global health crisis is being dealt with, but also, what is going on with the content in this issue?? Upon review, our eyes were blurred with a romanticized account of The Brave Little Toaster, a tell-all about Content review this month has reminded us about how chaotic af The Toike Oike is. That's a beautiful thing, very cathartic. Yeah. You should come write for The Toike Oike. Take your mind off of things.

WHAT HO?
The Toike Oike is a restriction on the movement of people and goods which is intended to prevent the spread of disease or pests. It is often used in connection to disease and illness, preventing the movement of those who may have been exposed to a communicable disease, but do not have a confirmed medical diagnosis. It is distinct from medical isolation, in which those confirmed to be infected with a communicable disease are isolated from the healthy population. Quarantine considerations are often one aspect of Skule™.

COLOPHON

Each month, the staff of The Toike Oike gather at nonspecific points within their own homes. They all sit at their desks, open Zoom, and listen to the editor angrily rant about God knows what. The team sits and takes notes on his mindless droning, converting the nonsense of a sad old man going insane in quarantine into the Toike you see before you.

control of the situation, starting the Raid Area 51 movement on Facebook. Now, I reached out to the US Government to see what relationship they have with Area 51 Raid organizer Jackson Barnes, and they replied immediately after a dozen emails and phone calls saying "Jackson Barnes is not now nor has he ever been employed by the Government of the United States of America." If that's not irrefutable proof that he's working for Area 51, I don't know what is.

You're probably asking yourself right now "what on God's Flat Earth does the deep state have to gain by trying to get people to raid their secret base?" Well, I have to admit that this question stumped me for a little while. Until I realized that this is just another governmental false flag operation, meant to confuse their enemy, the people of the United States. You see, this "event" had two main goals. First and foremost, they wanted you to focus on Area 51. Why? Because the aliens were moved out of Area 51 in 2013 when sleuths like you and me forced them to confirm its existence to the world. Sure, they still keep a bunch of their nuclear research there but the aliens were moved to Area 56, a more secure lab located in - where else but the country that controls the deep state - CHINA!

Now, obviously the deep state doesn't want us to raid any of their secret bases since they don't want us to know that they know that we know what we know. This is where the second reason for their "Facebook" event comes into play. By controlling the planning for the raid, the deep state was able to insert ridiculous elements into the plans so that rational Americans like you and me wouldn't take it seriously. A raid on a secret research facility in Nevada to uncover the truth sounds perfectly reasonable but "running Naruto-style to move faster than the bullets" is just absurd. The deep state knew that, by making the event sound as ridiculous as possible, rational people would ignore every plan to Raid Area 51 as another part of the meme.

Now, you may be asking yourself 'Jon, if COVID has been on Earth since the 40's, how come it's taken this long for it to get out?' Well, the answer to that question is the deep state, which secreted these aliens away in a secret base to study them. Unfortunately, the damage done to the deep state over the last 4 years has left them incompetent, leading to the aliens' escape. When they were finally free, the aliens started interacting with humans, possibly unaware that their equivalent of allergies was actually a contagious and deadly virus to humans.

Now, I want to continue with that train of thought, readers, but first, let's take a look at the nefarious actions of the Global Communist Government controlled deep state, who have managed to get governments around the world to actually HELP THEM COVER THIS UP! Knowing that critical-thinkers like you and me would discover their monumental screw up, the deep state quickly took Alright, getting back to the escaped aliens, you may be wondering "Jon, where does 5G fit into all of this?" Well, my friends, the virus itself has NOTHING to do with 5G technology or the mysterious toilet paper shortages tormenting the nation. Not directly at least. You see, as soon as the aliens escaped the secret labs they were trapped in, they put into action their master invasion plan by "giving" us 5G technology. Little did we the people know that "5G" stood for "5 Greeks" - as in the 5 Greeks who hid inside a gift to Poseidon on the Trojan beach - because 5G technology turned out to be a TROJAN HORSE!

Sure, it increased wireless speeds in the developed world, but it also started releasing - say it with me - MICROBOTS THAT HAVE BEEN PROBING US EVER SINCE!

These microbots are constantly floating around in the air we breathe, sneaking into our homes at night and entering our BUTTHOLES! Once inside your rectum, they take samples and transmit the data back to the mothership over - you guessed it - the new high-speed wireless network from which they were birthed! Have you been probed? How can you be sure? Well friends, I wish I could alleviate your fears. But, unfortunately, there is no way to know for sure whether or not you have in fact been probed. Except for one behavioral change. Friends, if you find yourself with an irrational desire to buy massive amounts of toilet paper, you have likely been probed.

Now, that's right friends, the great toilet paper shortages of 2020 haven't been caused by panic buying and fears of extended quarantines. No, friends, these poor souls are compulsively buying toilet paper because they are trying - and failing - to get the microbots out of their rectums. Even if they were to succeed in removing the microbots, it's unclear whether the damage would start to heal itself or if that nagging desire to scrape one's anus clean would persist.

So there you have it, folks. A global pandemic, a fake raid on a secret military base, worldwide unconstitutional mask mandates, and 5G towers causing a shortage of toilet paper. To some sheeple, these may seem like unrelated events. But, as always, when you dig a little deeper like Jon Alecks does, you can find definitive proof that it was all caused by the ever-incompetent, Global Communist Government controlled deep state. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is the Truth.

"massaging" over long distance have been expressed on paper! Take this delicious sequence of words from a man in Paris to the woman he (supposedly) enjoys being with:

"You had a belly full of farts that night, darling. Big fat fellows, long windy ones, quick little merry cracks and a lot of tiny little naughty farties."

My goodness gracious, clear the room, you two!

And let not such recent correspondence between romancers cloud your imagination! After all, even the ancient Aztecs needed to offload some hot and heavy feelings occasionally. In one archaeological dig, the following phrases were translated from among the earliest indecent ideographically written letters ever found:

"Here I am sitting and smouldering with passion, like sacrifices smoking. Not a passion any longer for flesh, but a complete hunger for you, a devouring hunger."

That is, until now.

Dearest fellow lewd-ites, now with the enforced happening of social distancing we have been given the opportunity to return to the land of lilting tongues lifting their glands up and down, spreading their salivating saliva over the tip of that envelope - can you picture it? (Well, you can if you include a particularly meta photograph within your salacious envelope, but that's not the point.)

BATMAN DETAINED FOR FLOUTING MASK MANDATE

Clark Kent
Toike Superhero Correspondent/
Definitely Not Superman

CENTRAL PRECINCT,
GOTHAM CITY – Late Wednesday night, Gotham City Police Commissioner James Gordon announced that the vigilante known as Batman had been detained for his continued and blatant violation of the federal mask mandate.

"For years, Batman has been allowed to operate as Gotham's shield against supervillains because he was protecting people," said Gordon. "Unfortunately, during a once in a lifetime global pandemic, the Dark Knight refused to wear a proper mask for the sake of others. Therefore, for the sake of Gotham, the GCPD has detained the Batman."

Though Batman is a fairly controversial figure among Gothamites, the public response to his detention has been largely positive. "At a time like this, it's important that we all do our parts to maintain public health," said Dr. Victor Fries. "Minimizing the virus like The Batman has is counterproductive. And yet, all I hear from some media outlets is that the virus is 'nothing more than the common cold'. Trust me, I know colds. This is far worse."

TO STEVEN SPIELBERG AND COLIN TREVORROW:

Dear sirs, I hope this letter finds you well. I understand that you are both busy people – more Steven than you Colin, but you hang in there – so I'll get straight to the point. As a long-standing member of The Toike Oike – U of T's and, quite possibly, the world's most read and respected publication – I feel it is my duty to apologize for the way we in the media have viciously mocked movies in classic franchises that you have made for one very similar reason – again, Colin, the one was more for Steven because your movie had other flaws that it should be mocked for.

Commissioner Gordon later issued a follow-up statement announcing that the Batman had been released, but that he would face serious fines and could face additional legal action should he continue to ignore the mask mandate. Gordon also added that other maskless heroes who visit – including Superman, Wonder Woman, the Flash and Aqua Man – Gotham would be subject to the same penalties.

It is believed that billionaire and vocal Batman-supporter Bruce Wayne has offered to pay the Dark Knight's fines as well as any legal fees that may result from his refusal to wear a mask.

Well, not anymore. Given the events that have taken place in the United States over the course of the pandemic, I can say with absolute certainty that Fact: Every time you masturbate god kills a kitten. How many more have to die?

As of September 10th, 2020, recent scientific studies have been showing a strong correlation between the lack of teenagers in public settings and the death of kittens worldwide. This upswing in feline mortality started off seeming as a complete coincidence, but as coronavirus has plagued the globe and quarantining has become the norm, this mortality rate has climbed faster than the son of a CEO with 3 sexual harassment cases against him climbs up the corporate ladder.

This sudden spike in perishing pussies sparked a revival of a seemingly satirical article from Georgetown University's satirical newspaper "The Gonzo". The 1996 article, aptly titled "Fact: Every time you masturbate god kills a kitten. How many more must die", brings to light the clear relationship between self-pleasure and the unholy wrath of god that is accompanied by it. Although punishment by the all seeing one on the grounds of "having a good wank" has been proven ever since the release of the J. Christ's New York Times which is why I watched Jurassic World. Yet, one thing has always bugged me about these films – again, Colin, I cannot stress enough that there were many other things that bugged me about your movie. Why would a public servant or a business reopen a beach or a theme park that had caused the deaths of so many when doing so would cause even more deaths?

Well, the obvious answer is money but that never quite sat right with me. Wouldn't so many people dying eliminate potential future profit streams while simultaneously scaring others away, further limiting your potential profits? Surely sacrificing profits in the short-term is preferable to causing more damage and possibly opening yourself up to criminal and/or civil cases. For me, this type of action was just too unbelievable.

Therefore, on behalf of all news sources and print media, I apologize for the criticism of that aspect of your film, Colin, because apparently the island is now A FUCKING VOLCANO AND NO ONE MENTIONED IT FOR DECADES! ARE YOU KIDDING ME!

Sincerely,

KATS AND MASTURBATION

Ellen Farber
Christians Against Masturbation

Best Selling book "The Bible", scientists have struggled to uncover the application of God's wrath. McGill University's own Dr. Richard Stroker told our Toike Oike correspondent that "we always knew that masturbation was against God's will but kept coming too quickly...to conclusions on what we thought were the effects of this heinous act". When asked further on his background on the topic, the 25 year-old professor said "I have been studying the effects of masturbation for over 20 years, and I am absolutely baffled by how long it took us to finish...this research and actually uncover the consequences of having sex with your own hand".

When the subjects were asked about how they spent their time in isolation, most gave bullshit non-descriptive answers including "You know, just hung around" and "Nothing really". However, after further peer pressure it was found that all

5 subjects indeed let off a load (in one case 5 loads) throughout their time in isolation. This research in combination with the patterns seen during this self isolation has led to an official statement from PETA who announced they would be commencing anti-masturbation propaganda in coalition with the Roman Catholic Church, to hopefully change society for the better.

a profits-over-people decision, though still appalling, is in no way far-fetched or unbelievable. In fact, it might be the most realistic part of both of your movies – seriously, Colin, even if I accept the fact that you can give 30-foot dinosaur the ability to camouflage itself, why would a scientist risk giving it that ability IN A FUCKING THEME PARK WHERE THE DINOSAURS ARE THE MAIN ATTRACTION!

Lords, ladies, and all other feudal leaders - now that we're all stuck behind the computer screen (or maybe we've been in the screen this entire time... but that's a bigger problem for the later lizards), and social media is the only way we'll ever be able to communicate with other human beings ever again, you have to be much more aware of those lagging internet points! This write-up right here is the reality check you've been waiting for - beware of racism! Many of you are probably knee-deep in controversy right this minute, and I'm here to solve your problems with: Top 4 Social Media Musts to Show your Followers You are NOT (emphasis on NOT) A Racist. Take notes.

Third, but definitely not least, the way to the heart of the non-racists is through celebrity examples! Trust me, if it's in the rules of the status quo, you can't go wrong. Thus, your next step should be to support a Youtuber or a TikToker who has recently been blamed for a racial controversy! There's nothing like showing your support for people who claim they have changed and promise to never say the n-word again (for the fifth time) - that will really let all Black people know you're on their side! Bonus points if you yourself aren't Black and take it upon yourself to excuse this person of their actions!

Now with the coins from your unprecedented amount of likes, you can really send it home with this final blow. To achieve ultimate anti-racism, you must understand this deep and philosophical idea: what do all humans have in common? Not our humanity or the fact that we're all "one colour" on the inside - the real answer? Mr. Krabs voice Money! Now young padawan, with this ancient and sacred knowledge, go buy some merch! No, not any merch that comes directly from Black-run organizations or any resources that could educate you - we don't want you to strain yourself from all this social activism, just go

Besides, being woke is so 500 years ago when colonizers hadn't invented the concept of race and superiority, and exploited that endlessly... but that's a problem for another set of human beings! All you need is a pop socket, maybe with the words "I can't breathe" to show how fully in-tune and ready you are to hop on every anti-racism trend! Post a picture or two on your story, and you'll have attained the ultimate spiritual state: Non-racist!

Now, this next step might be a little time consuming, but your racial ally points will drive straight through the roof! Have a photoshoot... at a protest! Get a professional photographer or take some pictures with your own iPhone (Android users not permitted). Most importantly, you must strike two poses: One with your fist in the air (make sure it's your left fist - wouldn't want to seem out of place now, would you?), and one with a thumbs down to represent your deep hatred for the patriarchy and systemic racism. Maybe even take a picture with one of the police officers just when they are just about to strike the peaceful protesters - who needs peace when you can have a corrupt and inequitable government! Really pose for that action photo -

Recently, we at the Toike learned of the passing of 1To-1T1 Editor Navid Nourian. Speaking with those who worked with him, Navid was not only one of the most funny, but friendly and caring people to ever work on the Toike. He was faced with challenges, but when meeting adversity, he handled himself with class. A young man taken from us too soon. Our sincerest condolences go out to Navid's friends and family.

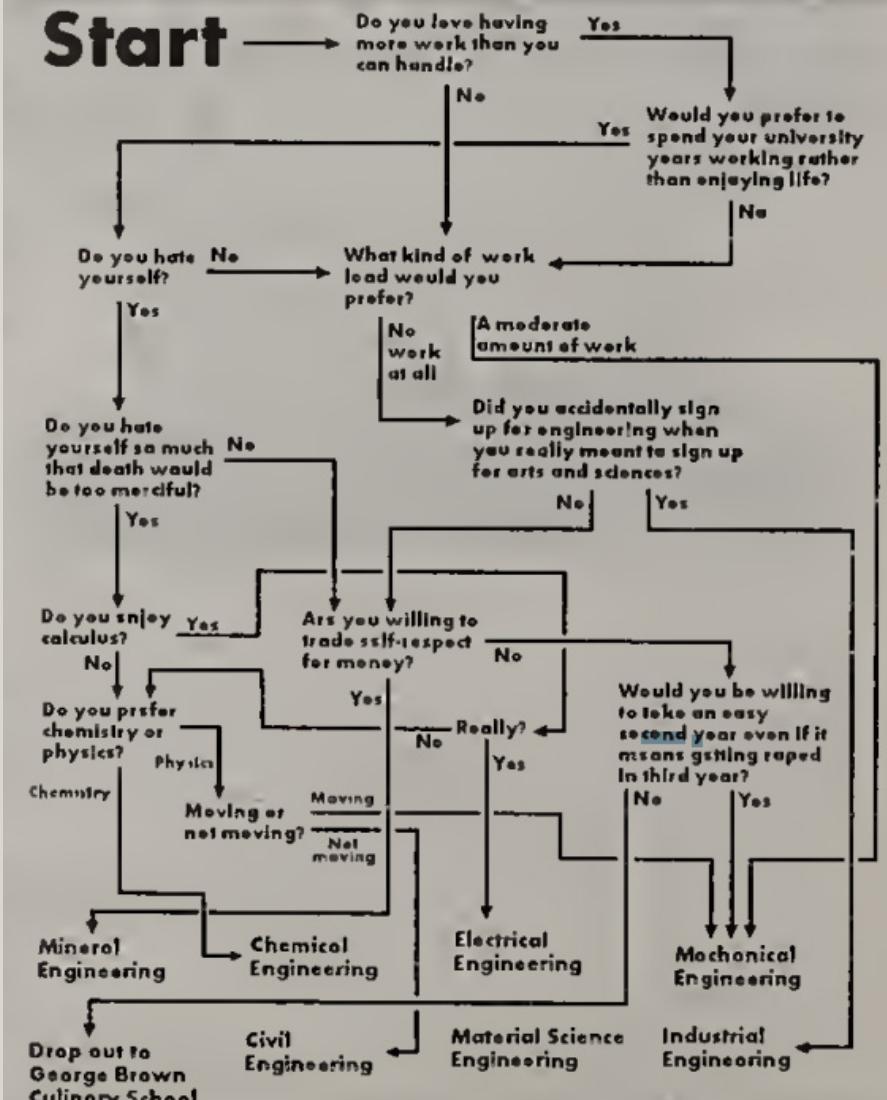

On this page we've taken some moments from his tenure as Editor, including celebrating the Toike's 100 year anniversary. You can find all of his issues on Skulepedia.

With Toike staff quarantining across the globe, the Toike has been able to uncover articles such as this one from regional affiliates from around the world, including Great Britain. Written sometime in late 1940 by an anonymous resident of Westminster in London, "If I wanna read durin' the nighttime, I will, arright Guv?" was an Op-Ed slamming public safety officials for requiring residents in and around London to turn off their lights during the London Blitz. Though the consensus among public health experts was that being bombed was not healthy and that turning out one's light during the nighttime would greatly reduce the risk of catching being bombed and spreading it to family members and neighbors, some in the public viewed the lights out mandate as governmental overreach. The writer of this article was one of those such people.

The Toike Oike Editor-In-Chief, Parker Johnston, has been afflicted with a mysterious bout of coughing.

For weeks now, the West Coast has been afflicted not just by rising cases of COVID-19, but also heavy smoke blown over from the Southwestern coastline, and a literal ton of moths taking over the Vancouver area.

When reached by Toike reporters for comment, Parker only could offer a few coughs and nothing more.

So what has Parker been afflicted with? We shall never know.

QUARANTINE IS SO BORING

Staying at home all day is so boring, I swear I've run out of Tik Toks to keep myself busy. I just woke up from my 3pm nap and started scrolling through my feed but I've already learned the Renegade so what's even the point. God, why is my life so hard?

I know! It's like, where do I even store my 8 24-packs of toilet paper? Pretty soon, I'm gonna need to start showering again so I can use the toilet paper to dry myself off.

Wow, TMI. Anyways, all my profs at school are being pains. It's like, "No, I won't turn on my camera you pervo, and it's illegal for you to even ask me that. I should have you fired."

Huh, okay. I guess my life is too hard for normal people to hear about, but whatever.

Yeah, tell me about it. I've changed three diapers today but that sounds really hard.

Wow, that's rough. This morning, I didn't have time to shower because I was prepping a lesson plan for my 6-year-old while breast-feeding my baby.

Yeah, my kid is crying in the next room so I'm gonna go.

TOIKE TAKE - TORONTO'S WORST

Otto Fellatio

Toike Glory Hole Explorer

This column features the 3 worst people, places or things (Nouns, for those of you who failed grade four) in Toronto this month, personal bias definitely included.

3. Hoarders – I'm sure we all probably know someone who stocked up on toilet paper this March. I'll tell you one thing: I sure didn't. I stopped wiping years ago. Personally, I think society has evolved beyond the need to wipe for a few reasons. Number 1, speed. Number 2, cost. The average Canadian spends $22 per year on toilet paper, which has inflated by 99999999999999% since medieval times. I refuse to be a slave to big TP. Born 2 shit, forced 2 wipe.

1. The Toronto Raptors – I'm just going to say it: the Raptors were bad. They gave up an average of 106.3 points per game this season. What the hell? That's more points given up per game than the Leafs, Blue Jays and Toronto FC combined. Also basketballs are orange now? I thought they were brown before. And longer. And they had laces.

"WALK INTO A BAR" JOKES OFFICIALLY DESIGNATED 'OUTDATED' BY GLOBAL COMEDY AUTHORITY

the GCA has decided that this joke format just isn't funny anymore and should no longer be used by civilized people. As with all outdated or dead jokes and memes, the alt-right will now be allowed to claim the joke and meme corpses they wish to use incorrectly for the next decade." Butts concluded his prepared statements by declaring that "satire is dead" though he did not elaborate on what this statement meant. When pressed for clarification, Butts abruptly ended the press conference, though he was heard muttering something about masks and choice.

be disappointed that the offensive nature of the jokes isn't what made them outdated. The GCA has repeatedly ignored complaints over the stereotypes that were often used as punchlines. Even now, when the joke has officially become outdated, the GCA is either indifferent to these criticisms of the format or unwilling to admit that those criticisms are valid. In the same presser, Butts also announced that the two other joke formats – "Knock knock" jokes and "No one:" jokes – were also reclassified as outdated. "Knock knock jokes have become more terrifying rather than comedic these days," said Butts. The thought of someone tracking you down to your place of residence merely to interact with you in person is an archaic and savage concept of the past. This reclassification reflects that change. With respect to the written 'No One:' joke format,

STAY THE FUCK AT HOME!

Stan

Toike Devil

HEY! YOU! Yeah, you. Come here. Are you fucking kidding me?

Oh,

you don't know what I'm talking about? OK, let me just describe a situation and let's see if it sounds familiar. So, this person, let's call them 'Hugh', has been watching The Walking Dead and the dozens of zombie movies that have been released in the last decade, and has spent that time preparing for, no, fantasizing about the zombie apocalypse. Now, 'Hugh' has said for years that they're ready for the zombie apocalypse. Take that in, 'Hugh' is ready for A DISEASE THAT MAKES PEOPLE WANT TO CONSUME OTHER PEOPLE!

Now, putting aside the fact that a zombie apocalypse would involve a serious amount of cardio (depending on the zombies), weapons, ammunition, non-perishable food (we're gonna count Twinkies as non-perishable so fuck you Woody Harrelson in Zombieland), et cetera, it would also, in all likelihood, involve killing your friends, neighbors and even your family now. I can't imagine anyone not having enough to keep them occupied at home these days, but CAN YOU IMAGINE WHAT 'HUGH' WOULD HAVE DONE HAD THIS HAPPENED EVEN 20 YEARS AGO? IN THE AGE OF DIAL-UP INTERNET AND LIMITED TEXT MESSAGES!

OK, so let's fast forward to this year, when a disease raged across the world. Now this wasn't a sexy disease or a cool disease. It was just a boring old respiratory disease. OK, so definitely no family murder needed. And you probably don't need that much weaponry or even cardio for it. SCORE!

In fact, all you need to help end this apocalyptic is stay home and watch TV as much as possible and wear a mask when they go out. Sounds easy, right? Well, apparently, it's NOT easy want. Just spreading your legs all over town.

5 THINGS TO DO TO KEEP YOURSELF STIMULATED IN QUARANTINE

Richard Strocher

3) Make a Home Cooked Meal

Now, let's move on to food. You might be tempted to get fast food or takeout every day but we all know that's not the healthiest of diets. And what better way is there to get hot and bothered than cooking yourself a nice meal. Beat your meat to get it nice and tender. Flick some beans into a pot for a sexy vegan bowl of protein. Throw some gluten-free buns in the oven to save your marriage. Stick your penis in a homemade apple pie like the main character from that one movie. That last one felt a little wrong but you know what I mean. Get yourself in the kitchen and GO. TO. TOWN. (Flavortown if you're feelin' Fieri.)

5) Watch Netflix

So, what do you do when you're at home all alone for weeks on end? Binge-watch Netflix, of course! Now, you can watch Prime or Disney+ if you want but I'm going with the streaming service that's become a verb. Now there's something on here for everyone. Looking to learn the basics? There's two seasons of Sex Education waiting for you. Wanna mix it up with some high fantasy from Poland but still need your fill of "fun time"? Try the first season of The Witcher. Just tryna "keep warm" on a cool Fall night? Too Hot to Handle will get your engine going. Sit back and get ready for a tearjerker, so grab the tissues, and enjoy.

2) Masturbate

The bars and the clubs have been closed for months and, even if you have a significant other, you probably haven't been seeing them as much as you used to. My point is that everyone has needs and it is important to address those needs in a healthy way. There's no joke in this entry so you can just go to the Number 1 entry now.

1) Play Among Us

Okay, I swear this one doesn't have any masturbatory connotations. This game is basically Spyfall or Mafia meets "The Thing" but IN SPACE! If that's not enough to convince you how fucking cool this game is, first of all, that's pretty sus, and, second of all, I don't know what will. Sure, the game will probably give you lifelong trust issues and will probably poison every relationship you have now and for the rest of your life. But you probably would have gotten those same trust issues from your friends muting themselves on Zoom anyways. You might as well have fun killing your friends while you grow more and more cynical.

4) Exercise

Now sitting around watching Netflix might sound good most of the time, but what about when you really need to get yourself all sweaty? Well friends, that's where exercise comes in. Since you're not leaving your apartment, you're not burning the Calories you used to burn walking or...doing other things. Try focusing on a muscle group you sometimes neglect like, I don't know, the forearm of your dominant arm (NOT your submissive arm) and try some rapid finger movements or a sort of shaking or stroking motion. You'll be surprised what it can do for your tennis game. If you're not interested in strength-training, you should try some flexibility training to learn how to do the splits. The trick here is to spread your legs every day, going a little farther each time. By the time quarantine is over, you'll be doing the splits whenever you much more than any other toilet paper company, who have reduced their prices. How do you explain this?

Toike: Hello fellow Toikers! We are here today with an executive from the toilet paper mogul Sharmin Xtr Strong to discuss with us the current situation, that people are now calling the TP Crisis. He has agreed to this interview under strict instructions to remain anonymous due to the sensitivity of the subject. So, my first question to you Mr. Sharmin is, how is the company coping with this spike in sales?

Sharmin: The company is adjusting surprisingly well! This spike scared us at first, but now I think we have found the perfect balance.

Toike: Is that so? How does this affect you personally? If you do not mind me asking.

Sharmin: Ah, some things are better left unsaid, but let's just say that there have been quite a few times that my own bathroom time has been sacrificed for this company. It has left me rather...unsatisfied at times.

Toike: So, I am assuming that the rumors that Sharmin is asking the employees to bring in personal TP stock from their homes to meet the demands, including opened rolls is true?

Sharmin: (looking a bit nervous) No no, it's not like this...anymore. There was a time when we did bring in personal stock and split the piles of paper to add to the outgoing shipment, but now things are much better.

Toike: Really? It does sound like the company has cracked the problem! How are your stocks doing now then?

Sharmin: (looks relieved) The stocks are through the roof! While the rest of the industries are suffering, the toilet paper industry is flourishing!

Toike: Umm... I kind of meant your own personal stock of toilet paper...

Sharmin: (Flustered) Oh! They are fine now, thank you for asking. Toike: Now, our research experts here at the Toike have monitored the activity of the company, and while Sharmins prices are as high as ever, the company's sales are

TOP 5 SCARIEST HORROR FILMS (GIVEN THE ADDED CONTEXT OF THE PANDEMIC)

Dr. Jonathan Crane

Toike Phobiologist

Why hello, my fellow phobophiles and fear-fans. Well it's 2020, and everything happening in the world is either terrifying, vaguely apocalyptic, or very apocalyptic. It's positively delightful! To celebrate the horrific happenings, let's look back at some of the scariest cinematic achievements of all time – with the added context of our modern world of course.

3) Contagion (2011)

Did the kid do it? Should a single juror have relitigated the entire case against him? Is a system where public defenders are in no way incentivized to zealously or even competently represent the people they're appointed to defend inherently broken? Who knows? But one thing is certain. Twelve men, including a senior citizen, in a poorly ventilated room with no facial coverings for hours upon hours is a terrifying sight to behold in a post-COVID world.

4) 12 Angry Men (1957)

Did the kid do it? Should a single juror have relitigated the entire case against him? Is a system where public defenders are in no way incentivized to zealously or even competently represent the people they're appointed to defend inherently broken? Who knows? But one thing is certain. Twelve men, including a senior citizen, in a poorly ventilated room with no facial coverings for hours upon hours is a terrifying sight to behold in a post-COVID world.

5) Predator (1987)

Ok, forget about the high-tech, heavily-armed invisible alien monster with the dreadlocks who keeps on killing Arnie's soldier friends. You can even forget about the fact that the muscle-bound cast of this testosterone-fest included not one but two future Governors – a true indictment of the state of US politics and the qualities Americans look for in their so-called "leaders."

No, what truly terrifies me about this film, what wakes me in a cold-sweat in the middle of the night, is the manliest and least socially distant handshake in the world. They were breathing each other's air. If that doesn't send a shiver down your spine, I don't know what will.

2) Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers (2002)

On to more of a psychological scare: The Two Towers. Now, I know you're probably thinking "Wait a sec, the Fellowship broke into smaller groups of 2 or 3 to keep everyone safe. It's not a horror film." To that I say...that you are indeed correct. This film doesn't contain as much of the close-proximity mouth-breathing action prevalent in most modern horror films. However, who among us has not witnessed Smeagol's descent into madness and trembled? The extreme isolation lasting centuries is something I think we can all relate to right now. Deep inside, we all know that we could be just another day away from talking to a homicidal version of ourselves in the mirror.

1) Get Out (2017)

I may be insane but I'm not crazy. Jump scares last seconds, monsters hiding in the dark may cause nightmares for weeks, and pandemics can last years. But the psychological horror elements of Jordan Peele's directorial debut will stay with you for the rest of your life. At once intensely thrilling, uncomfortably funny and terrifyingly thought-provoking, "Get Out" cements itself as one of the best films of the decade in any genre. Just don't try to go to sleep right away after watching it. You won't be able to. I guess there truly is nothing more terrifying than the realities of the Hell we already live in.

Day 13: So... my pack is still home at our den... and I'm beginning to wonder how we just seem to have an endless supply of spoils... it used to take them a whole day at the office to hunt for our spoils, but now they seem to just appear at our door!! I wonder why we never did this before... why did they ever leave in the first place...?

Day 21: Ok. Look. I'm a dog. I love walks. It's in my nature. But, if I just got back from a walk with one of the pack, I'm not looking to immediately head out again on yet ANOTHER walk. Go walk someone else Johnny! There's 4 other members of our pack other than me! Choose one of them! I've already marked every tree and hydrant on the street with my scent twice over!! How can you expect me to mark anything when I have nothing left in my bladder to mark with!! And not to sound like a "Debbie Downer" or anything, but I don't get any alone time anymore!! I love my pack! And I LOVE spending time with them, but when I can't even take my afternoon nap anymore without having to lay on someone's lap and have them constantly petting me as I try to sleep, I become a tad bit frustrated! And I'm a dog! I don't get frustrated!

Day 43: I can't take it anymore. My pack is out of control. They will not stop walking. And when they're not walking, they want to play fetch, or pet me, or just bug me in some way. I have no rest. No peace. It's unbearable. I hated going to bed at night. Now it's the only thing I look forward to in a day, because I know I have at least 6 hours of sleep, undisturbed. I'm striking. No more constant walks. No more fetch. No more Mister Nice Pet.

Day 50: Turns out it wasn't rabies. And now I'm at home but stuck in my jail cell... My pack has mostly kept me in what they call a "kennel" since the incident. How was I supposed to know the pointy stick had a harmful liquid in there? And why was he going to use it on me then?? Anyway... now I'm not getting any walks... my pack lets me out in the backyard 2, maybe 3 times a day and I get my food and water served in my cell... I think they're worried for the other packs, but I'm not dangerous! I protec is all... I shouldn't have taken my walks, games and belly rubs for granted... you never know when it'll -- OOO!! SQUIRREL!!

FAST FOOD EVERYDAY IS IRRESPONSIBLE AND UNHEALTHY

Getting takeout every day, especially fast food, is both financially irresponsible and incredibly bad for one's health. Countless studies have shown that fast food is extremely high in fat, cholesterol, sodium and countless other ingredients that have an adverse impact on a person's health. Moreover, all takeout places charge you for food preparation, making daily takeout much more financially burdensome than even buying some Kraft Dinner at a grocery store and throwing it in the microwave.

What, I never said that!

FOX NEWS APOLOGIZES FOR HYPERBOLIC EBOLA COVERAGE

Tiger Blatster

Toike News Correspondent (for News on News Companies)

NEW YORK CITY, USA – Fox News Channel has issued a statement apologizing to the public for their "irresponsible coverage" of the Ebola crisis in 2014. The statement, which cites the extremely small US death count attributed to Ebola (2 persons) as proof that the channel overreacted to the crisis at the time.

Fox Corporation Chairman and CEO Lachlan Murdoch issued a separate but related statement saying that he deeply regrets the way his company exaggerated the risks posed by the disease, adding a statement of his regret directed at President Obama for the way his employees berated and denigrated the then-Commander in Chief both on-air and in-print with the company's complete support.

"It has recently come to my attention that 2 is in fact less than 200,000, so I must extend my regrets to Former President Obama and his administration, though we will not be printing any retractions whatsoever."

K, I can't keep writing this. I'm honestly surprised I got past the first paragraph. I know satire typically requires some suspension of disbelief but even my powers of bullshittery aren't strong enough to keep going on this one. Unfortunately, satire has been dead for the past several months so this is what I've had to resort to: a concept so unbelievable that I would need to shout it through several feet of ice to tell Satan. Obviously in this scenario, Hell is basically the opposite of Dante Alighieri's description of it from the Divine Comedy. But a former reality star is President so what the fuck do I know about impossible occurrences? I need a fucking drink.

I know a lot of people have been complaining about the prospect of a few weeks couped up at home but I think this time alone at home will be good for all of us. Personally, I plan on reading more, maybe trying to learn a new language and definitely cook-

Day 23: I've watched too much porn. I swear, I was playing Smash Bros. and Captain Falcon taunted but he said "Show me your boobs." I rage quit because I didn't appreciate the dig at my being out of shape.

Day 30: Apparently my parents are "worried" about me, so they set up

Day 65: I watched both.

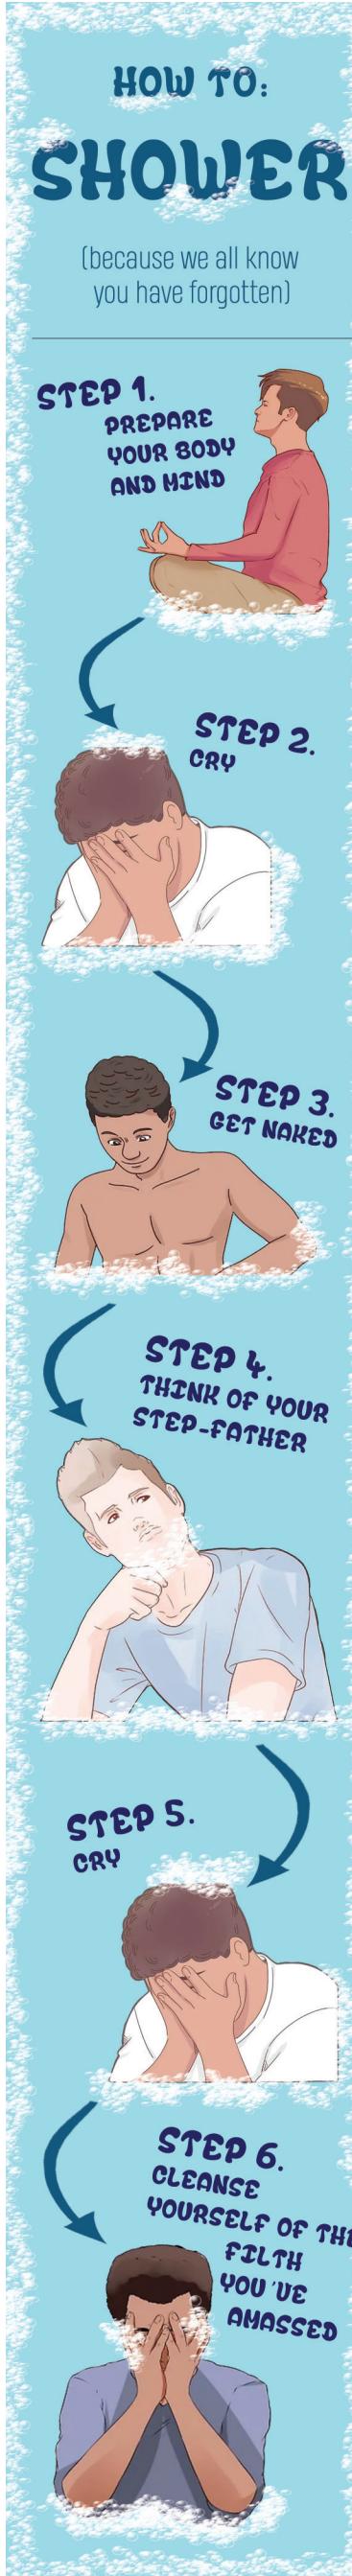

Day 76: How to kill Tom nook. Wait this isn't Google is it? Fuck where's the delete key? Why the fuck did I turn on speech to text?

Day 88: Wow, I just reread my last few months of entries and they are insane. I think I might be doing what everyone else is doing, but like a full month late most of the time. That's weird. But, I swear, I am 100% back to normal.

Day 89: So, one of my friends posted a video of themselves canoeing today...with a kayak paddle. Well, Sandy, WHY DON'T YOU JUST FUCKING USE A SPOON TO WIPE YOUR ASS? BECAUSE, THAT'S NOT WHAT IT'S FOR? THAT'S KIND OF MY POINT! AAAAAAHHHHHHHH!

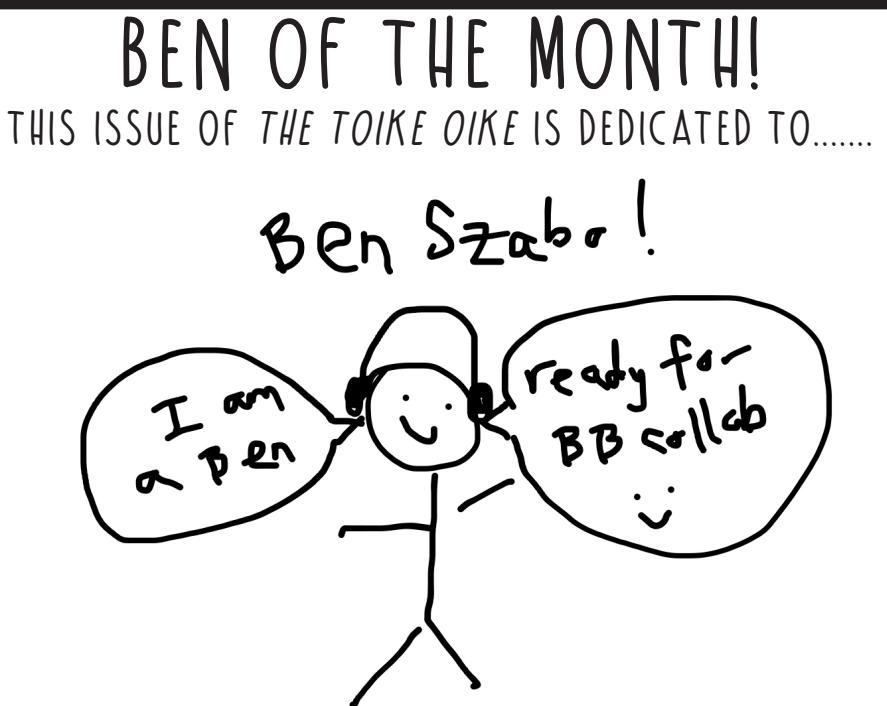

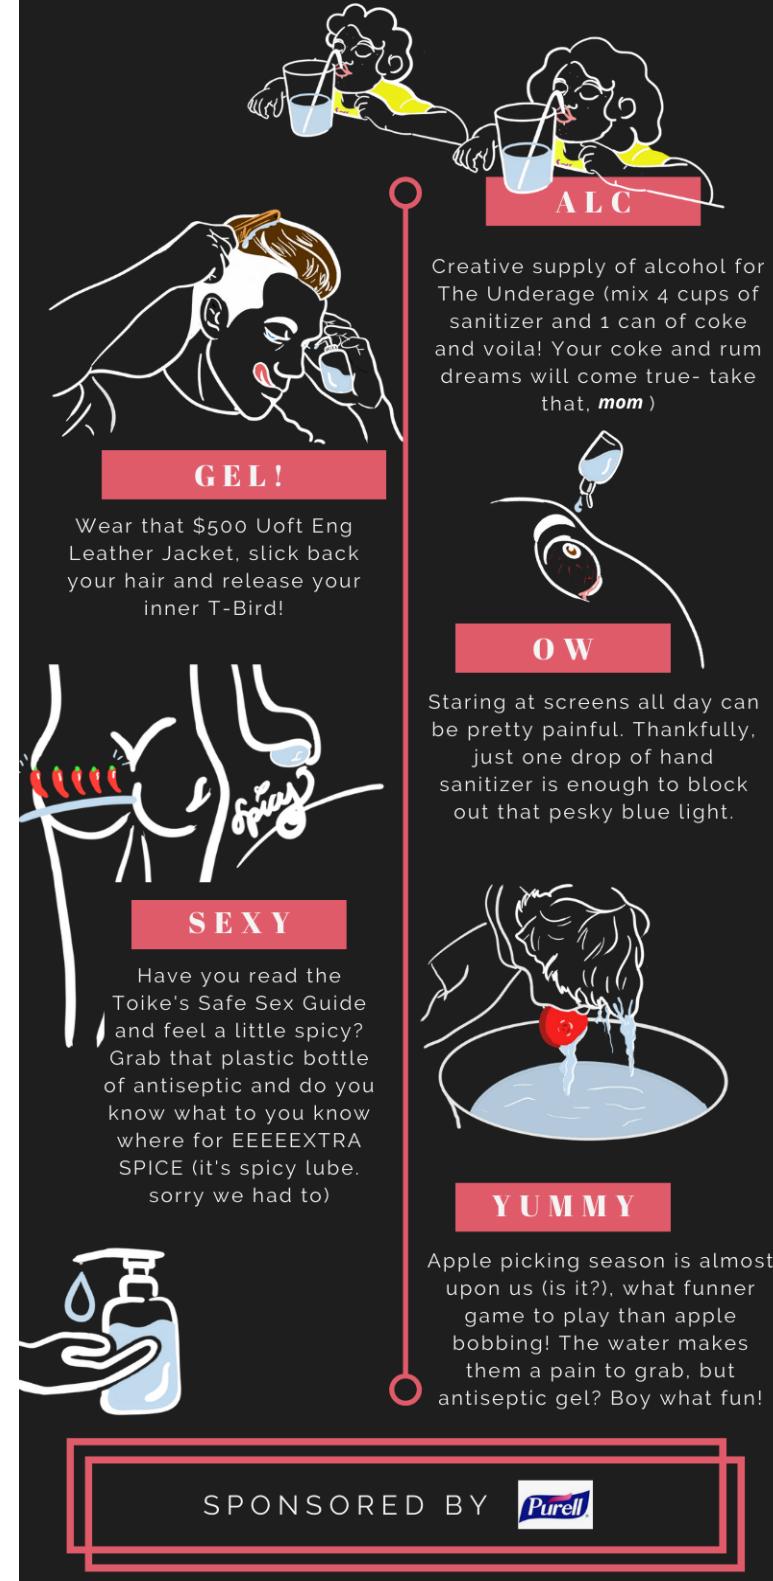

Day 100: We've decided that we're a great conversationalist. What's that Smeagol?

You need to teach the children sex is BAD. You will get pregnant and die.
