Dear Editor,

I enjoyed the drawing featured in your editorial section with Tolkien drinking brandy like some kind of literary grump. I am a huge Tolkien fan, so I thought it was humorous and well done. I am a bit worried that it might be offensive to some readers, though, so I thought I would bring it to your attention.

Sincerely,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

I am a law student at the University of Toronto, and I was absolutely thrilled to see your recent article on the Toike Oike virus. As a future lawyer, I am very concerned about the spread of such malicious software.

Sincerely,

Zombie Apocalypse Prank Goes Awry

In a prank gone bad, two University of Toronto Engineering students were involved in an incident that left one dead and several others injured. The prank, which was intended to scare classmates, resulted in a violent confrontation that led to one student being killed and several others being injured.

The prank involved two students, Adam Hatter and Kevin Grolsch, who claimed to be zombies and entered an occupied dormitory, ambushing several students. The students were in their room when they heard a noise and opened their door to find two individuals dressed as zombies.

Mr. Hatter proceeded to enter the room and, to the sound of moaning and groaning, began to attack the students with knives and other weapons. He then turned to his roommates and asked if they were ready to continue with the prank.

As the students tried to escape, Mr. Hatter began to stab and chop at them, injuring several and killing one. The students were able to call for help, and emergency services were rushed to the scene.

The incident has sparked a debate about the appropriateness of such pranks and the responsibility of individuals to ensure that they do not cause harm to others.

Invisible Man Mugged By Mimes

The Invisible Man, a popular New York City street performer, was recently mugged by three individuals dressed as mimes. The mimes approached the performer, who was performing in Times Square, and demanded his wallet and phone.

The performer, who is known for his invisible box act, refused to comply and was physically attacked by the mimes. The mimes then fled the scene, leaving the performer injured but alive.

The incident has raised concerns about the behavior of street performers and the need for increased awareness and education about the potential dangers of interacting with strangers in public places.

TTC to Encourage Handheld Lifestyles through “No Escalators” Plan

In an effort to improve health and fitness among commuters, the TTC (Toronto Transit Commission) has announced a new initiative called “No Escalators.” The initiative aims to encourage passengers to use stairs instead of escalators, promoting a more active and healthy lifestyle.

The TTC has partnered with local fitness clubs and gyms to offer discounts and incentives to passengers who choose to use stairs. The initiative will be implemented gradually, starting with select stations and expanding to more locations over time.

The TTC hopes that this initiative will not only improve the health of commuters but also reduce the strain on the TTC’s escalator system, which is often subject to breakdowns and malfunctions.

Windows 10 Released to Brave Reviews

Microsoft has released its latest operating system, Windows 10, to mixed reviews from users and critics. The new operating system promises to improve upon its predecessor, Windows 8, by offering a more familiar and user-friendly interface.

However, some reviewers have noted that Windows 10 still lacks certain features that were present in Windows 8, such as the ability to pin frequently used apps to the taskbar. Others have praised the system’s stability and performance improvements.

Microsoft’s VP Marketing, Alex Kipman, has stated that the company is committed to listening to user feedback and making changes as necessary to improve the user experience.

The release of Windows 10 marks an important milestone in Microsoft’s strategy to revitalize its operating system business and compete with Apple and Google in the mobile and cloud computing markets.
Pump Fiction

We've always appreciated Tarantino's "trunk shots" in his movies, but believe me, you've never seen any like the ones in this movie. These shots pull the audience right into the movie and act as an ice-breaker between the director and the actor. Although there's some blood and unnecessary dialogue involved in the movie, Tarantino's surprise cameo appearance from under the bed makes this movie a solid 6.9/10.

2069: A Space Odyssey

We still haven't fully understood what this movie is trying to convey to its audience. For some odd reason, the "Pizza delivery guy" scene lasts 35 minutes, and unlike any other porn movie, no one has sex in it. Also, the scene when the guy finally finishes takes place on an intergalactic space mission, and while I've totally been there with the whole screaming-for-several-minutes after sex thing, I'm not sure people normally die afterward.

The fact that we couldn't understand anything about this masterpiece makes us think it has some deeper meaning. I'm sure the director knows what he's talking about. Great movie.

Tit-anic

James Cameron has had this idea for decades, but he had to wait 18 years until technology was sufficient enough to turns this dream into reality. Each character in this four-hour masterpiece was filmed using motion-capture suits on location in a warehouse draped in green screens. Actor Leonardo DiCaprio described the challenges, noting that "Dry humping those motion-capture balls was the second hardest thing I had to deal with."

This movie has everything: love, sex, and a raunchy musical number featuring Pitbull. The original Titanic was just the tip (of the iceberg).

Dye Hard

Inspired by real life events, this is an thrilling movie about "that keener frosh" who dyed himself from toe to tip. Having sacrificed his comfort in order to raise Skule spirit and awareness, this brave young man swears to convince at least 60% of his Frosh group to dye their full body, and I must say the tale is inspiring. The scene where he walks under the rain to convince his friends to dye, only to have his own fade... it's enough to make you cry.

Rumors are already swirling that a sequel, Dye 2 Hard, is already in the works. It is thought to centre on a Head Leedur convincing her Frosh group to Dye Hard, or die tryin'.

The Fast and the Furious: Toikeo Drift

Surprisingly, this movie involves no cars at all. This is an experimental POV movie shot with a phone camera by a drunk engineering student at Steins. Our protagonist gets kicked out of the bar for being too rowdy, and can't even drive home thanks to his all-too-familiar state of inebriation.

The level of detail in this movie is stunning. You can actually see the camera drift from side to side as the characters meander down College Street with an estimated 0.15 BAC. This examplary film raises awareness to alcohol consumption and its benefits for having tons of fun at night with friends. For maximum realism, watch it in 3D and play a drinking game such as: drinking.

The Matrix

Worst movie ever. Not only was the content boring and stale, the plot was completely incomprehensible. It feels like the directors just threw a bunch of linearly independent stories together without leaving any space for the important points. Neo’s identity matrix looks like a big deal at first, but the antagonists just seem to multiply as if he wasn’t there. I was looking forward to this movie based on the origin of the talent behind it, but it’s pretty determinant that I was wrong.
Neil deGrasse Tyson Just Fucking With Us

Fabulous astrophysicist and host of Cool Neil deGrasse Tyson shocked me last week after announcing that most of his purported "astonishing facts of nature" were completely fabricated.

After an extended debate about Plato with a colleague, Tyson informed reporters that his opponent's mother had been reclassified as a dwarf planet. To his surprise, his claim was picked up by a variety of scientific publications.

"I've been pulling facts out of my ass for years," said Tyson. "It started when my buddy dared me to argue that butterflies hunt for the joy of it. The best I've done is convince my mate that fungi could think at all. America to Bring Democracy to UTSU

Harry T. Sickle

Following heated discussion and several fist-to-face incidents, Unite students had decided to get rid of the anti-democratic forces of the UTSU. The UTSU AGM has been widely criticized for a lack of transparency, and fairness, and these criticisms have reached the ears of the Oval Office. Troops have already been deployed and are expected to arrive on campus within a matter of weeks.

Moon More Life to Thrive

CABINETS THAT HONG KONG CAN HAVE

A world of investigation initiated as a cooperative effort between graduate students and researchers. Unite students at McGill university have found that the moon is a more hospital for life than the Earth. Some of the rocks collected have been analyzed and the data collected has been used to create a new model of life on the Earth.

"From a scientific perspective, these results are shocking," said Jason McGee, another graduate student who worked on the project. "From a personal perspective, I sort of saw this result coming.

The scenario presents a coetus that may be both in and out of the final decision on an earlier random event. Although various "original" researchers imagine how these principles have been researched and used in practical applications. To be able to talk about this thought experiment is also a remarkable achievement. The discussions of the interpretations of sex applied to society have been intense.

"It has long been apparent that the moon is a more hospital than the Earth," said Paul Gooch when asked for comment. "This is because the moon is more stable and has a higher gravity. It is likely that life could exist on the moon, and that this could be a safe location for humans to settle."
The Devil Has Yet to Come to My Séance
An open letter to Park Dale Satanists

Dion Arnold
Toike-Oike-Watchdog

What am I doing wrong? Dr. Loewen has come and gone again as it always does, for better or for worse. This year, as with all others, my dear lover has not come to me. The one whom I’ve craved for since the first day of creation, candy getting and black mass rituals.

The Devil has once again forsaken me. Now that the last day of the month of October has passed, I can finally tell all. According to reports, due to a lack of demand, the Devil will not be returning back to the U of T next year. “I found out that rosi is actually a photography ‘Enthusiast’” Amir Khat

“I was locked up without food or water for two weeks. I was useful, and said that now no one could harm me. He will be returning back to the U of T next week.”

I really wish they wouldn’t export replacement cats.

I should really stop replacing them, I guess. I will be doing this next year.

“Anyway”. Jacob Shen, 20 year old student in the Department of Psychology.

Tauri being captured by the children early last week, only to get lost again. This has been released a mere two days later. The journalist credits this release on his persistence knowing of high-level English standards.

Simpler, a native Minnesotan, resident, was taken hostage during an insurmountable battle in the Federally Administered Tribal Area (FATA) in the northwestern province near the Pakistan border. Though no official video was released by the organization, Simpler was found at a U.S. forwarding base the very next day.

“I was locked up without food and water for the most part”, he recounted. “Eventually they dragged me to a tent. One of, a tall guy wrapped in ammunition belts came up to me and pressed gun at my head, screaming at me in Pushtu to get down. I felt the rest of the gun barrel scraping my forehead. He then yelled at me in English, ‘Inmersal! Do not touch the old lady’s ghost, or spirit, they say they are in the air! Can I or is it a psychological delusion – born of void, fulfillment, anxiety, or despair? Answer me or I shoot!’”

“Luckily, because I was playing the role in high school, I was able to easily answer him back in a few minutes with my every style response, complete with these sub-points and clear, supportive evidence from the text. They immediately untied me and dropped me near the base.”

Simpler later stated that he always questioned whether what he learned in high school English was useful, and that now he has no doubt that it was. He will be returning back to the U.S. next week.
