Inside

Is My Roomate Going to Kill Me?

An Illustrated Guide to U of T

How to Survive a TTC Delay

Mayor Ford Says "Sorry" Again
Air Canada Flight Ends in Tragedy After Oprah Does Pre-flight Presentation

Kate Middleton

Air Canada Flight 759 was in critical condition following the collision that occurred with a large rock in 2015. The flight, from Toronto to London, was carrying 200 passengers and 20 crew members. The pilot of the flight, who was on a happy note, with a smile on his face, had been personalizing T.V. boat and celebrity icon Oprah Winfrey teaching passengers to a special Oprah-led safety presentation in which they were promised a few of my plans for the fall, and autographed copies of her new book! That's a wrap.

Helen Hunt

Three new bodies were found after the plane’s crash-landing in the Atlantic Ocean. The bodies were identified as those of a 54-year-old woman, a 42-year-old man, and a 3-year-old child. The three were passengers on the flight. All three were from Toronto.

According to independent investigators, the police found some of her stuff and some of the window seats.

Police Demonstration Forced by Activists

Officers still recovering from various traumas

Vinnie Bracy

Police were forced to bring in a large crowd of law enforcement officers to clear the area and prevent any further disruption. The demonstration continued for several hours, with officers working to keep the peace and ensure the safety of all involved.

The police told media to subdue the crowd in short order with a few gentle taps of their nightsticks and just three or four charges to be laid against the protesters, but added that a self-defense is a key to maintaining order.

Live Music Saturday

The police did manage to break up the disturbance.

Free Poem and Comedy Sunday

Tornado’s twenty people took the stage.

All Day Breakfast and Canadian Tire Money at par every weekend!

Games Room with plasma TVs (available for groups)
Freshman’s Ability to Hold and Use Chopsticks Not As Special As He Thought

Dishonest
Take the Faking Expert

University of Toronto

Imagine a faked education of Monday’s

of Tuesday’s of Wednesday’s of Thursday’s of Friday’s

University of Toronto psychology professor Michael Morgan asked his students to give testimonies about a faked education. Morgan was so impressed by his students’ stories that he decided to include them in his upcoming book, “The Faked Education.”

“Many students have reported experiencing a sense of accomplishment and joy when they realize that they have been able to fake their way through college,” Morgan said.

Morgan’s book will be released next year and is expected to be a bestseller among college students and academic institutions.

News Briefs

East Coast Wrecked by Hurricane Morgan Freeman

What began as a dumb claws—twister off the coast of Florida became a record-breaking double-headed storm that forced thousands to evacuate.

The hurricane, which began off the coast of Florida on Friday, caused widespread destruction across the state. More than 100,000 people were left without power, and several fatalities were reported.

“People were caught off guard by this storm,” said Miami Mayor Francis Suarez.

Is My Roommate Going to Kill Me?

Eric the Miser

Under the bed: not enough

hoax had an idea it to be at it when Lauren offered a piece of wood and began miming it as a hammer.

“Mike, you have a problem,”

Woodward said.

“Don’t worry, Mike, I will find you a safe place to live,”

Woodward promised.

If your roommate stays up all night and sleeps during the day, he's faking watching you while you're sleeping. There's been a recent increase in reports of people who claim to be asleep when they are awake. It can be a sign of mental health issues or drug use. If you notice this behavior, talk to your roommate and encourage them to seek help if needed.

How to Survive a TTC Delay

Just one week after moving to Toronto from Smallwood, Neil had dared try, was a speciality of Psychology, Mike had already accompanying him unexpectedly

on Mike’s “would sleep with” list

Lauren O’Bailey, two students cohort were Lisa Harmon and six years to graduate high school in five years, and the first male and Cantonese are what’s eager to flex his cultural prowess.

Dinosaur. However, the alcohol pouring the dye over myself until “Gonna be a hard one,” Mike said.

Morgan’s research suggests sustainable lodgings in the next years. He has been giving talks around the country about the importance of sustainability in the workplace.

A Match Made in the App Store

Taking a look at the new ways people are using the Internet for sex

Harry T. Stickle

“Tinder is like a dating app for sex,” Stickle said.

“People can use it to find casual partners, or just to have a fun time.”

Tinder offers a range of features, including swipe right, swipe left, and toggle on or off. Users can also add pictures and write bios.

“Tinder is really popular with college students,” Stickle added.

Tinder profile breakdown

Tinder: Athletic, grey, thanks. For this sweet and enlightening interview, I waited two hours to talk to the first Christian Muggle user to see how he felt about us.

Tinder: My friend and I were just swiping randomly for fun. When she saw Jacob, she was terribly excited to meet him.

Becca: Well, you really changed my life! I was swiping right for all of them and was just swiping randomly for fun.

I thought I was going to die.

Jacob: Uh, no. I had been hooking up with girls who were friends of girls who were friends of my friends. I had never been with anyone on Tinder before.

Becca: Well, you actually changed my life! I was going to die when I swiped right for all of them.

Tinder: Of course! If you know what I mean! I was like, ‘Oh man, I should have seen this coming.

I was like, ‘Oh man, I was swiping all over the place.’”

Becca: Yes! I love you. We will see each other soon.

Tinder: Oh, no. I think that’s kind of weird, but I’m happy

to see you soon.

Becca: Thank you. I really enjoyed meeting you.

Jacob: Oh, well, guess what I think! We think we were a good match.

Tinder: That’s so obvious.

How did you know you were a good match?

Jacob: Well... I don’t know.

I think we just bonded over food. We both love pizza and chocolate.

Becca: Thank you. I really enjoyed meeting you.

Jacob: Yes! I think we were a good match.

Becca: Yes, I love you.

We will see each other soon.

Tinder: Oh, no. I think that’s

kind of weird, but I’m happy

to see you soon.

Becca: Thank you. I really enjoyed meeting you.

Jacob: Oh, well, guess what I think! We think we were a good

match.

Tinder: That’s so obvious.

How did you know you were a

good match?

Jacob: Well... I don’t know.

I think we just bonded over

food. We both love pizza and

chocolate.
A (Poorly) Illustrated Guide to U of T

The Tenured Professor (Magister possessius)
Likes: Chillin’ like a villain
Dislikes: Doing stuff

The tenured professor has achieved what many of us dream of: a six-figure salary, baller benefits, and a virtual guarantee of never losing its job. As you can probably guess, it gives absolutely no fucks about anything any more. Having relied for so long on slaving graduate students for research output, the tenured professor is more likely to show up to class in a Notorious B.I.G. shirt than publish a first-author paper.

The Asshole TA (Phallus erectus)
Likes: Giving undergraduates a hard time
Dislikes: Contributing to the education of undergraduates

Some say the Asshole TA was once an undergraduate who became lost in the bowels of Gerstein library. Others say it was driven mad by countless hours of research. All we can say for sure is that it feeds on the hopes and dreams of hapless undergraduates. Be warned: leaving your final answer on quiz as 0.5 instead of ½ might just earn you a 0, and if your lab equipment fails you had better have an extra set in your back pocket.

The LifeSci (Scholasticus sanguinarius)
Likes: 4.0 GPA, bird courses to boost its GPA
Dislikes: Anything that stands between it and medical school

When you first meet a LifeSci (Figure C), it will seem like a kind, genuine being who could become a close friend. Make no mistake: it is one of the most bloodthirsty and vicious creatures prowling the streets of U of T. Beneath its wool fleece lie some 59 knives of various materials and strength. If you threaten its chances to get into med school, or are mistaken for doing so, it is probably too late to start running.

The ArtSci (Discipulus insinitus)
Likes: Partying, self-discovery, living the college life Hollywood promised all of us
Dislikes: Productivity, sobriety

The ArtSci (Figure B) is the most readily spotted animal at U of T, given the hours it spends at Robarts where it nests throughout the school year. Like the hummingbird, it is known to dart between faculties throughout the day, with many returning to their haunts long after graduation. It seems to like the taste of sugar water from Starbucks and beer from the many bars on campus, like St. Michael's College.

The Engineer (Machinator fabrica)
Likes: Free-body diagrams, Linux, cheap beer
Dislikes: Hygiene

The Engineer (Figure A) is one of the rarer creatures at U of T. Their workload combined with the University’s outdated equipment confine them to labs for days on end, and even when free they seem to prefer darkness to the light of day. The distinguishing features of the Engineer are its scruffy neckbeard and putrid stench. There is no need for us to describe the smell—you will know it when it hits you.

The Tendra Professor (Maister possession)
Likes: Chillin’ like a villain
Dislikes: Being staff

The tenured professor has achieved what many an underdog dreams of: a six-figure salary, baller benefits, and a virtual guarantee of never losing its job. As you can probably guess, it gives absolutely no fucks about anything anymore. Having relied for so long on slaving graduate students for research output, the tenured professor is more likely to show up to class in a Tendra Professor’s B.B.C. shirt than publish a first-author paper.

Some say the Tendra Professor was once an undergraduate who became lost in the bowels of Gerstein library. Others say it was driven mad by countless hours of research. All we can say for sure is that it feeds on the hopes and dreams of hapless undergraduates. Be warned: leaving your final answer on quiz as 0.5 instead of ½ might just earn you a 0, and if your lab equipment fails you had better have an extra set in your back pocket.

The Arts
Likes: Self-discovery, living the college life Hollywood promised all of us
Dislikes: Productivity, sobriety

When you first meet an Arts student, they may seem like a kind, genuine being who could become a close friend. Make no mistake: it is one of the most bloodthirsty and vicious creatures prowling the streets of U of T. Beneath its wool fleece lie some 59 knives of various materials and strength. If you threaten its chances to get into med school, or are mistaken for doing so, it is probably too late to start running.

The LifeSci
Likes: 4.0 GPA, bird courses to boost its GPA
Dislikes: Anything that stands between it and medical school

When you first meet a LifeSci, it will seem like a kind, genuine being who could become a close friend. Make no mistake: it is one of the most bloodthirsty and vicious creatures prowling the streets of U of T. Beneath its wool fleece lie some 59 knives of various materials and strength. If you threaten its chances to get into med school, or are mistaken for doing so, it is probably too late to start running.

The Engineer
Likes: Free-body diagrams, Linux, cheap beer
Dislikes: Hygiene

The Engineer is one of the rarer creatures at U of T. Their workload combined with the University’s outdated equipment confine them to labs for days on end, and even when free they seem to prefer darkness to the light of day. The distinguishing features of the Engineer are its scruffy neckbeard and putrid stench. There is no need for us to describe the smell—you will know it when it hits you.

The Tendra Professor
Likes: Chillin’ like a villain
Dislikes: Being staff

The tenured professor has achieved what many an underdog dreams of: a six-figure salary, baller benefits, and a virtual guarantee of never losing its job. As you can probably guess, it gives absolutely no fucks about anything anymore. Having relied for so long on slaving graduate students for research output, the tenured professor is more likely to show up to class in a Tendra Professor’s B.B.C. shirt than publish a first-author paper.

Some say the Tendra Professor was once an undergraduate who became lost in the bowels of Gerstein library. Others say it was driven mad by countless hours of research. All we can say for sure is that it feeds on the hopes and dreams of hapless undergraduates. Be warned: leaving your final answer on quiz as 0.5 instead of ½ might just earn you a 0, and if your lab equipment fails you had better have an extra set in your back pocket.

A (Poorly) Illustrated Guide to U of T

The Trinity quad is a sanctuary for the aristocratic Trinity College students. Here they can find refuge from the non-Trinity plebes with which they must interact on campus. Visiting Trinity College during the first few weeks of classes is a prime way to get yourself scoffed at and have your familiarity with the works of Franz Kafka harshly scrutinized.

The Engineer (Figure A)
Likes: Free-body diagrams, Linux, cheap beer
Dislikes: Hygiene

The Engineer is one of the rarer creatures at U of T. Their workload combined with the University’s outdated equipment confine them to labs for days on end, and even when free they seem to prefer darkness to the light of day. The distinguishing features of the Engineer are its scruffy neckbeard and putrid stench. There is no need for us to describe the smell— you will know it when it hits you.

The Tendra Professor (Figure C)
Likes: Chillin’ like a villain
Dislikes: Being staff

The tenured professor has achieved what many an underdog dreams of: a six-figure salary, baller benefits, and a virtual guarantee of never losing its job. As you can probably guess, it gives absolutely no fucks about anything anymore. Having relied for so long on slaving graduate students for research output, the tenured professor is more likely to show up to class in a Tendra Professor’s B.B.C. shirt than publish a first-author paper.

Some say the Tendra Professor was once an undergraduate who became lost in the bowels of Gerstein library. Others say it was driven mad by countless hours of research. All we can say for sure is that it feeds on the hopes and dreams of hapless undergraduates. Be warned: leaving your final answer on quiz as 0.5 instead of ½ might just earn you a 0, and if your lab equipment fails you had better have an extra set in your back pocket.

The ArtSci (Figure B)
Likes: Self-discovery, living the college life Hollywood promised all of us
Dislikes: Productivity, sobriety

When you first meet an Arts student, they may seem like a kind, genuine being who could become a close friend. Make no mistake: it is one of the most bloodthirsty and vicious creatures prowling the streets of U of T. Beneath its wool fleece lie some 59 knives of various materials and strength. If you threaten its chances to get into med school, or are mistaken for doing so, it is probably too late to start running.

The LifeSci (Scholasticus sanguinarius)
Likes: 4.0 GPA, bird courses to boost its GPA
Dislikes: Anything that stands between it and medical school

When you first meet a LifeSci, it will seem like a kind, genuine being who could become a close friend. Make no mistake: it is one of the most bloodthirsty and vicious creatures prowling the streets of U of T. Beneath its wool fleece lie some 59 knives of various materials and strength. If you threaten its chances to get into med school, or are mistaken for doing so, it is probably too late to start running.

The Tendra Professor
Likes: Chillin’ like a villain
Dislikes: Being staff

The tenured professor has achieved what many an underdog dreams of: a six-figure salary, baller benefits, and a virtual guarantee of never losing its job. As you can probably guess, it gives absolutely no fucks about anything anymore. Having relied for so long on slaving graduate students for research output, the tenured professor is more likely to show up to class in a Tendra Professor’s B.B.C. shirt than publish a first-author paper.

Some say the Tendra Professor was once an undergraduate who became lost in the bowels of Gerstein library. Others say it was driven mad by countless hours of research. All we can say for sure is that it feeds on the hopes and dreams of hapless undergraduates. Be warned: leaving your final answer on quiz as 0.5 instead of ½ might just earn you a 0, and if your lab equipment fails you had better have an extra set in your back pocket.

A (Poorly) Illustrated Guide to U of T

The Engineering (Machinator fabrica)
Likes: Free-body diagrams, Linux, cheap beer
Dislikes: Hygiene

The Engineer is one of the rarer creatures at U of T. Their workload combined with the University’s outdated equipment confine them to labs for days on end, and even when free they seem to prefer darkness to the light of day. The distinguishing features of the Engineer are its scruffy neckbeard and putrid stench. There is no need for us to describe the smell— you will know it when it hits you.

The Tendra Professor (Figure C)
Likes: Chillin’ like a villain
Dislikes: Being staff

The tenured professor has achieved what many an underdog dreams of: a six-figure salary, baller benefits, and a virtual guarantee of never losing its job. As you can probably guess, it gives absolutely no fucks about anything anymore. Having relied for so long on slaving graduate students for research output, the tenured professor is more likely to show up to class in a Tendra Professor’s B.B.C. shirt than publish a first-author paper.

Some say the Tendra Professor was once an undergraduate who became lost in the bowels of Gerstein library. Others say it was driven mad by countless hours of research. All we can say for sure is that it feeds on the hopes and dreams of hapless undergraduates. Be warned: leaving your final answer on quiz as 0.5 instead of ½ might just earn you a 0, and if your lab equipment fails you had better have an extra set in your back pocket.
Kate Middleton
Tokyo, Oct. 18 -

The 21-year-old girlfriend of Prince William, the heir apparent to the British throne, arrived in Tokyo on Sunday for a nine-day visit to Japan, the first official visit by a British royal to the neighbor.

The visit comes at a time when relations between Tokyo and London are at their lowest ebb since the end of the Second World War.

William, who is expected to marry Kate by the end of next year, will visit several key locations during his stay, including the Meiji Shrine, the Yasukuni Shrine, and the Imperial Palace.

The visit is expected to be a test of the new relationship between Tokyo and London.

“By the end of this year, the Japanese and British will be able to say with pride that their two countries are closer than ever,” said a member of the royal family.

The visit is also expected to be a significant development in the relationship between Tokyo and London, which has been deteriorating in recent years.

The two cities have been at loggerheads over a range of issues, including territorial disputes, trade matters, and cultural differences.

The visit is also expected to be a significant development in the relationship between Tokyo and London, which has been deteriorating in recent years.

The two cities have been at loggerheads over a range of issues, including territorial disputes, trade matters, and cultural differences.

The visit is also expected to be a significant development in the relationship between Tokyo and London, which has been deteriorating in recent years.

The two cities have been at loggerheads over a range of issues, including territorial disputes, trade matters, and cultural differences.

The visit is also expected to be a significant development in the relationship between Tokyo and London, which has been deteriorating in recent years.
Harper to Replace Foreign Aid with Likes and Prayers

Vincent Bray
Toike Oike (Party Bucks)

OTTAWA – A move that has rocked the political world, Prime Minister Stephen Harper announced Friday that the federal budget will no longer include foreign aid initiatives. Instead, the Conservative Party’s “Economic Action Plan” will launch a new social media campaign to lend attention to spiritual support, and conversion rates of virtual prayers are said to be equal to one prayer when there are so many obvious differences between a simple click and a heartfelt call for divine intervention.

“If one like can be said to be equal to one prayer, then in theory we should be able to convert these resources into funding for international aid,” says Minister of Finance Joe Oliver. “When you ‘like’ this kind of content, the prayers don’t come from anywhere specific — they just appear out of thin air. We hope to harness this transformation to generate virtual dollars, and get struggling regions the help they need.”

“We were impressed by the innovation of the Facebook team in pioneering social media currencies,” said Prime Minister Harper in a statement to the press. “My cabinet also drew inspiration from Kool-Aid and communications companies, who frequently donate to charities based on the number of texts and phone calls made by their clients.”

A press release written by the Prime Minister’s office stated, “This campaign represents significant savings to the Canadian public, since we basically run the whole campaign with an unpaid intern and some Twitter and Facebook accounts. Added benefits include that Canadians will get all of their depressing international news on their Facebook newsfeeds, which they can easily ignore, and they will no longer feel the need to donate to pushy charity workers. News programmes will even have more time to cover important issues like sports and what a Nikki Minaj is.”

Over the upcoming few weeks, Harper will be meeting with financial advisors to discuss the conversion rates of virtual prayers from different faiths, as well as the looming threat of popular Facebook pages creating divine inflation.

Kathleen Wynne Delivers Transparent Government

Aries

You will briefly unite the Faculties under one banner, as all threats to the University do.

Taurus

Your first week at university is the perfect time to renovate yourself in your core, plastic surgery, a forged Kevin Durant passport, and a shortwave radio would be a good start.

Gemini

Oh man, you star chart is insane this month. Like, “Dude, your body will, anyway. Everyone is starting to worry.”

Cancer

You’ll be the first to discover a crazy new disease! It’s amazing. How’s that possible? Well, the doctors who study you will find out. You’ll be the first to discover it. Yes, you.

Leo

You’ll be automatically notified of any and all upcoming meeting dates, times, and locations.

Virgo

You'll be the first to discover a crazy new disease! It’s amazing. How’s that possible? Well, the doctors who study you will find out. You’ll be the first to discover it. Yes, you.

Libra

You will briefly unite the Faculties under one banner, as all threats to the University do.

Scorpio

Your first week at university is the perfect time to renovate yourself in your core, plastic surgery, a forged Kevin Durant passport, and a shortwave radio would be a good start.

Sagittarius

Oh man, you star chart is insane this month. Like, “Dude, your body will, anyway. Everyone is starting to worry.”

Capricorn

You’ll be the first to discover a crazy new disease! It’s amazing. How’s that possible? Well, the doctors who study you will find out. You’ll be the first to discover it. Yes, you.

Aquarius

You’ll be automatically notified of any and all upcoming meeting dates, times, and locations.

Pisces

You will briefly unite the Faculties under one banner, as all threats to the University do.

Want to Join the Toike? Read this Black Box!

Get involved with your friendly neighbourhood Toike Oike! Anyone can join. It doesn’t matter what year, faculty, discipline, or college you’re a part of; if you can read this then you’re good enough for us.

Are you fairly hilarious? Can you photoshop like a boss? Can you draw or sketch? Do you have an appreciation for humour? Do you have writing experience and want to try your hand at humour writing? Do people think you’re funny but you’re far too modest to ever admit that you’re a funny person? Do you have the mad English skills required to pick out our typos and grammatical fumbles?

If you answered “yes” to ANY of the above questions, we could definitely use a person like you!

Read over to www.toike.skuile.ca/join and get on the mailing list!

You’ll be automatically notified of any and all upcoming meeting dates, times, and locations. Meetings are where we work on the Toike. They’re filled with great friends, good times, and tons of free shit like food and Beverages.