Fine, We Didn’t Want You To Vote Anyway

Oliver Clothesoff
The UTSU elections are coming! This last minute, you may be beginning to see representatives inviting your lectures or lunch lines for a brief spiel on how and why to vote for them. You should be wondering why you should vote at all. After all, the average U of T commuter probably spends about 30-40 hours per week on campus — closer to still during exams. Why should you be invested in the politics of your home away from home?

Voting can be a very time-consuming process. Reports suggest that it takes five minutes to research the basic platforms of each of the candidates, and another two to seven minutes to actually vote, depending on if ROH is being a bitch or not and if you’ve recently received a new Stiqmat that you absolutely have to respond to.

In addition, your vote probably won’t have any sway, because there are some 60,000 other U OfT students also voting who probably know a hell of a lot more about politics than you do. Each and every one of these students knows exactly what each candidate wants and who would be the best representative for the UTSU. If you look among your fellow students, you probably will never respond to this.

So the UTSU elections probably won’t affect you, they take valuable time away from bugs watching House of Cards, and your vote wouldn’t have any impact.

Given all that, I’m not too sure why you want to vote. Seriously, just... go. And just remember if you don’t vote and a praised student who favours grad needs over undergrad needs gets elected, or if you don’t know one winner from the other, make sure to complain about it.

What are your thoughts on the elections this year? Let us know in the comments below.

I understand that some of you might be concerned with our recent activities. That series of lawsuits was a bit of a shock, as lawsuits are now recognized as people under the law, and we have even addressed several of the concerns brought by the Toike Oike staff.

Let us know what you think in the comments below. Have you seen any other examples of self-reinvention online?

M t Elumelu (also known as "Mr. Goodluck" or "Tobi"") has been last seen at a hotel in Ogboli, a specialty store, apparently during a business trip. In his various gold-sticker adorned, fake sports ball caps, more moments later, he was found hanging on a wire by a so-associates. He was later pronounced dead.

"It was just terrible," a witness said, "the foam from his mouth kept dripping on his face. I tried to save him, but then I realized that they were cheap knock-off."

Current reports later stated that Matthew's seizure was triggered by an increase in environmental combination of "The word we drew into the lines and pieces of the toilet seat. Usual rule of thumb is that a hole can be found for any use. But that is not true everywhere."

In vague order, here is your 2015 Guide to UofT Toilets.

Sanford Fleming & Galbraith

Galbraith and Sanford Fleming are some of the most poorly designed buildings that UofT has to offer, but Galbraith’s bathrooms in particular stand out. The double door system, although effective in controlling odors, creates two possible disasters: incoming and outgoing restroomers are forced to navigate a tight space with one another, as the pressure fluctuates blown out the doors. The Toike recommends upgrading to a full air-handling system, complete with deodorization.

No one really knows what the 59 bathroom look like since they are only used as emergency relief valves between lab and drinks. Enter at your own risk.

Don’t do it, man. They smell, they leak, they are an air dryers, and they swap men’s and women’s rooms from floor to floor. That’s some messed up shit. If you have time to kill and are looking for a quality crochet, you can go to the right floor. That’s some messed up shit.

These bathrooms always seem to be under construction, but if you make sure to be on the right floor it’s quick. 5 square foot stall encased in an overflowing plastic bag then by the nook. These are some of the more rustic lavatories, but some stalls feature the dreaded black seats.

McLennan Physical Laboratories

More like McLennan Physical Laboratories, this is where you want to go to give yourself the royal treatment. KP has a room with 10 to 12 more seats, and one is required to have a bathroom. These are not well-known, regularly maintained, and, most importantly, severely visited. It’s like having an entire building dedicated to relaxing, brutal use.

Listens, we all have our crises. Sometimes you are running between classes and there is no time to reach a "proper" restroom, so you need to improvise. Just avoid Sidney Smith, the place is dominated by Bratty artists. Mink is fine but a little of out of the way. Graham Librion has a nice bathroom but is a bit cramped, and Wellesley has the most futuristic bathrooms of them all- A little over the horizon.

On the subject of Matthew’s online presence, Dr. Capluni informed us that “due to Mr. Elumelu’s unfortunate passing, his online legacy has vastly improved on all areas, such as revises-per-second, habitual memorialization, like profile photo, and postmemorial online reconciliations with his ‘lasts’. His message of a swag-diff lifestyle will live on in all our hearts.”

Study Finds Republicans Still Hip

Steven Scugall

Toike Oike Reporter

A new poll has found that the Republican Party is as cool as your dad. Our latest survey found that Republicans have been struggling with volunteer and national support, and it comes to the younger generation of voters. It has been theorized that this alienation is a result of Republicans’ lack of political correctness. However, this latest study from the American Values Today (AVT) research group tells a different story.

Of the nearly 6900 people surveyed, 82% said that the Republican party is better and bolder than their 73% baby blue Impala soft top, 7% stated that they didn’t do it, and 20% chose to fire all the lazy, uninspired, robots in the building.

In other news, Editor-in-Chief Colin Parker has already decided that his new pages are way too racist and.Migrations being nano-revised. I'm glad that it's finally public knowledge that no Republicans are both phat and funky fresh.

About This Project

Alright, listen up. I want to make things clear from the get-go that this isn’t one of those passion projects. We, which is to say the Toike Oike staff, are broke. You might be wondering how that happened, considering how rich we got after selling our souls to the UTSU. It’s a funny story really. It turns out that Taco Bell franchises are super expensive. The meat substitute comes free, but the medical suits are where they get you. We would be in the gutter if not for the income from cashing in our old empties.

Anyway, the project. Like most grassroots organizations rooted in the history of the University, we have no reliable source of income. I assure you, we’ve tried, but you can only run Graditude fraud and sneak yourself into the compulsory academic fees so many times before the Registrar gets nosey.

Therefore we need you to open your hearts and your wallets to get the Toike back on its feet. Naturally, we don’t expect you mongrels to do anything out of the goodness of your hearts. Maybe if we offer you some random crap you’ll put that $100 Skule Endowment Fund refund to good use.

Risks and Challenges

You can’t expect this to happen if we get funded, but it’s still pretty fucking tight.

Shipping and Return Policy

In the event that our characteristic negligence results in catastrophic physical harm, please contact your local mortuary. In the event of catastrophic emotional harm, please contact toike@skule.ca and we’ll send you an uncomfortable hug by mail.

Canadian Forces to Use ‘Because I Am A Girl’ Camouflage

Technology passes trial period in downtown Toronto, now ready for combat

“First people would stop and talk out of herdman Canadian Forces to have announced that soldiers deployed overseas will soon be equipped with the latest in camouflage technology. Developed in the heart of Toronto, a new uniform is designed to make military personnel almost undetectable.

“We’re incredibly proud of this breakthrough,” said Joy Vasquez, head researcher on the project. “Like many of our critics, we were skeptical about a simple vest and field of pamphlets warding off danger in volatile countries, but you can’t argue with results.”

The research team is confident in their product, in fact, that they have been testing it in a downtown core of Toronto for nearly a year now.

Toike Oike (The Toike) is the official student newspaper in the University of Toronto's Victoria College. The Toike is published twice weekly during the academic year, and monthly during the summer months. It is produced by the Toike Ofikie, a student-run publication that is supported by funding from the University of Toronto Student Union (UTSU) and the Victoria College Student Society (VCSS). The Toike Ofikie is known for its irreverent tone and its ability to make controversial and provocative statements. The Toike Ofikie has a reputation for being a place where students can express their ideas and opinions freely, without fear of censorship or retribution. The Toike Ofikie is also known for its strong focus on social justice issues, particularly in relation to gender and sexuality. The Toike Ofikie is a place where students can come together to debate and discuss important issues, and where they can learn from each other about how to build a more just and equitable society.
