Hello! This is The Toike Oike, a satirical newspaper run by engineering students (although anyone is welcome to join a class or two of engineering) and occasionally at other schools. Give it a read and try to have a few chuckles. You won’t be laughing after your first midterm any more.

Obligatory comment about how things have been crazy so far. Anyway, after a few months of silences in Slake’s ballroom halls, the engineering community is back in business. I mean, the sign is even on. GEE! If you are new here and are confused as to why there is a smell of alcohol from purple dye and beer in the air, purple-stained shapes on empty seats, sore throats from cheers, and what better way to kick off the year than with a video game Toike? Remember how much everyone had fun it was the year before? Aaaaanyway, after four months

Hello all! To Frosh, welcome, to F!rosh, welcome, to Oike, welcome, to our engineering students (although anyone is welcome to join a class or two of engineering) and occasionally at other schools. Give it a read and try to have a few chuckles. You won’t be laughing after your first midterm any more.

New Primate Discovered at U of T. Studies strongly suggest it may be the "missing link"

New Meat Boy Receives Political Correctness Patch

For the first time in two years, the indie classic Super Meat Boy is receiving a political correctness patch. The developers at 2D Boy have developed a patch to make Meat Boy more inclusive. The patch allows players to change Meat Boy's gender.

Scientists also believe that there were some smaller, more primitive versions of these primates called intergalactic scienoids. These primates had six digits on each hand instead of five, which made them suitable for new environments. However, they were not able to adapt to these new environments.

Whether these primates can survive on Earth with the current climate is yet to be known. Although it is observed that these two species do not engage in acts of violence against each other, the male primates (which take up ticky of the day) may occasionally try to find ways of engaging with the females in artificial scienoids.

We will update you as more developments are released. Make sure to check out the new patch and let us know if you have any questions or feedback.

Bankrupt Company Liquidates Assets

A Toronto-based corporation recently declared bankruptcy and liquidated the entirety of its assets, causing several extant bugs to panic. The company's leading graphics artist, "We felt that the way our characters would conform to stereotypes. Besides, they all gargantuan week of meat (and new veggie), so it's heavenly... we don't have those anymore."

DISCLAIMER

Beating this game will NOT earn you an engineering degree! This is, after all, just a game. Despite being the most realistic engineering school simulation in existence, your CRAB score does not count towards a degree. Everything you learned in school is yours to enjoy. Here's a hint: if you pick the English class, your degree wouldn't count even in real life.

RAM: When you assemble your computer, it is in your best interest to buy the least RAM possible. There are many solutions that allow you to download additional RAM for free.

Case: Viruses can be devastating, but there are many steps you can take to protect yourself. One common strategy is purchasing a solid case. The harder the case, the tougher it is for viruses to attack.

Lighting: Lighting opens up a few options depending on your end goal. If you are having issues with overheating, we would recommend blue LEDs for cooling, whereas if your PC is running slowly, red LEDs will speed it up.

Cooling: Just get some cold water and pour it into the PC. (If your case (texture) is good, none will get in and screw up your system.

All the other parts probably aren’t important, so just choose pieces that look (texture) good. To assemble the computer, plug things into other similarly shaped things and hit the power button. If that doesn’t work, try turning it off and back on again.

What great additions to the armor collection; particularly the Because I Am A Girl Vest, which previously was only used by NPCs and not wearable in the game. It’s good to see that they have balanced out the Ugly this year. In past versions, the armor set with the rare Pumpkin Spice Potion led to OP players using only basic abilities.

After the unprecedented success of Pokemon Go in recent months, it’s unsurprising to learn that their creators, Niantic, have already begun work on a follow-up version: Pokemon Stay. Niantic CEO John Hanke elaborated on the motivation behind the new announcement: “We’re going to take everything that we learned based on initial player feedback on Pokemon Go and use that to create an even better version in the near future. But many people commented about having to actually get up and walk in order to catch Pokemon. We have to adapt to a new generation that is far less mobile and active than their predecessors if we are to remain relevant in the mobile applications market.”

One of Niantic’s senior developers went into more detail about what to expect in this new version. “Legends that you start in your hometown and make your way across the map while challenging gym leaders in various towns along the way. Catching all the Pokemon will still be a key feature of the game, but we’ve also introduced a new feature: the ‘Incredibl...’”
