EDITORIAL

Hi Honey Bunnies!

Are you ready for a journey of self discovery? Let's get active and personal. SexToike! Feast your eyes on not your daddy's (or mommy's) kind of satirical newspaper.

For those who know me personally, sex is something I love to talk about. It doesn't matter if you're promiscious or celibate or anything in between, understanding sex and how it shapes our society is an important step in the journey to adulthood. God, now I sound like a SkuleMom.

Nonetheless! The Toike staff had a lot of fun this issue exploring humor related to sex which I hope you'll enjoy! Also, some Winter Olympics content did sneak its way in. I'll give it a pass for being topical and... omg have you seen how sexy Scott Moir and Tessa Virtue are on the ice? That my friends, is sexual tension made sport.

*With love,
Jennifer Dixon

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Ms. Editor,

Can you write an article about Valentine's Day? And how its RIDICULOUS that people us guys have to play this guessing game of what our women arbitrarily want. Its like a giant pissing content and my wallet hurts.

- Not waiting in line at Pandora

Dear Pandora,

When a girl turns 13, a little faerie whispers in her ear and tells her the true purpose of Valentines Day. Think of V-day as your annual relationship check-up. Do you still have:
☐Trust
☐Things in Common
☐Space on her charm bracelet

Love,
Jenn

Dear Ms. Editor,

Waterloo or UofT?

Sincerely,
Keener A.F.

Dear Keener

Honestly, like, whatever floats your boat man. You're going to be sucessful in whatever you commit to. So, suck it up and flip a coin.

In all seriousness though, consider the lifestyle for your university experience. City or start up town? Co-op or PEY. Your choice will affect your life greatly, but there's little way of knowing in advance how your experience would differ. Search your feelings.

Best of luck,
Jenn

Hey so I'm thinking of starting a club for Ballroom Dancing Student Mathmeticians (BDSM). We're a group of math majors who are really pasionate about Ballroom dancing and the math involved in the steps. How can I bring more engineers into the club?

-Anastasia Steele

Dear Ana

Advertise girl! Maybe don't mention its for mathmeticians, use the acornym. In-person is best. Just go right up to a mathy engineer and say "Hey you! Would you like to join my BDSM club? You can be my partner" and smile in a friendly manner.

All the bes,
Jenn

Spencer: So, uh, hello there dear reader. You're growing up fast and the two of us here think that it's time we have the talk.

Leigh: We don't mean that we would like to just talk. We want to have the talk. You know... "the talk"?

Spencer: Right. That talk. The important one. That everyone has to have. Because it is important. Hmm. How about you start Leigh?

Leigh: Of course, I'm very comfortable and knowledgeable about the topics covered within the talk. And, dearest engineer (or friendly artsy), we just want you to know that we're having the talk for your own good.

Spencer: Indeed. Well. Uh. When a man and a woman love each other--

Leigh: You mean two people. God, Spencer, it's 2018.

Spencer: Right, right; sorry. Three people even. However many make you comfortable really. As long as everyone consents. Consent is important. Very important.

Leigh: Yes... Consent. I like that thing. Everyone should like that thing. Just like one, two, three people can like each other's... things.

Spencer: Speaking of things. It's totally ok to use, uh, inanimate-things to do things to your...thing. Like, it's safer that way sometimes.

Leigh: RIGHT! Yes. I also highly recommend a quick Google search for "doing things and stuff with some number of people". You won't be disappointed.

Spencer: Speaking of disappointment. Feelings are important -- where did you think I was going with that?

Leigh: Oh, sorry, I thought you were talking about me.

Spencer: Well, we were supposed to teach you about sex, but I think you've learned a much more important life lesson here.

Leigh: The lesson that... uh... er...

Spencer: Sex is ultimately a futile act of selfish procreation simply to create another generation of humanity to suffer?

Leigh: That's the one!

Every full moon, or first Friday of the month, the members of the Toike Oike gather in the darklands of the Greater Toronto Area to perform an ancient ritual. Passed on through the centuries, this ritual summons Ridicula, the great goddess of satire. At climax, members of the Toike Oike are blessed with natural writing abilities and are filled with humor. By sunrise, ink spills onto the pages of your leftover print quota and the students of UoTF Engineering are gifted once again with a new issue of the Toike Oike.

WHAT HO?

Toike involves the combining and mixing of genetic traits: specialized cells known as gametes combine to form offspring that inherit traits from each parent. There are different views on what constitutes Toike or other satirical activity, which can impact views on satirical health. Although the term satirical intercourse, particularly the variant coitus, generally denotes penile-vaginal penetration and the possibility of creating offspring, it also commonly denotes penetrative oral Toike and penile-anal Toike, especially the latter.

DISCLAIMER

The fair-minded opinions expressed in this newspaper reflect those of the Engineering Society and the University of Toronto. In fact, they even reflect the opinions of the writers and the engineering community in general. NOT! If you happen to find any of the material within these pages offensive, do not try to sue us, as we have a crack team of racially diverse lawyers ready to bring tha pain and give out mix tapes. The social uproar in the suburbs of Toronto has grown to the point where Mayor John Tory has declared a state of emergency. Schools have been closed, and work on the Eglinton Crosstown LRT has been brought to a screeching halt. The municipal government is contemplating instigating a curfew in the area.

"Fam, they don't respect us. Mans be cheesed, bruh," said Jack Green, one of thousands of high schoolers refusing to go back to class unless the situation improves, "mans been disrespected. Wait till I tell my father about this!"

Mr. Green is a member of a to afford my own apartment in Toronto and my Netflix subscription? This is why I joined the fight."

What began as a peaceful protest blocking the progress of construction on the new transit line quickly evolved into a full-blown revolution, highlighted by the sack of Yorkdale Shopping Centre. For the local government, this resulted in the loss of an important economic resource and strategic point. This is the second time Yorkdale has fallen to millennial revolutionaries in 2017, the first being during the violent Avocado Revolution that resulted in the smashing of two iPhone screens and a pair of Beats headphones. The Collective are now in prime position to march on the mostly-ceremonial Town Hall.

"We gonna get bare subsidies, fahm. Tory best listen because he's oppressing us. This is generational discrimination, fam." added Green, who was setting up a makeshift barricade in the second-floor Foot Locker.

At time of publishing, the revolution's leaders were trying to rally their supporters before they lost interest and moved on to something else, as millennials have been known to do from time to time.

To Create The Ultimate Unique Tinder Profile with Six Quick Tips.

Tip #1:
You musn't let people forget you have an artistic side. Add a nice filter that makes you look like an old soul (sepia is a classic, just like you're in the 1930s), and have a mysteriously cloaked expression on your face. You're an artist in humanly body, and that means you have got to be the most avant-garde, the most meta, the most willing to challenge the system. And the best way to represent that challenge is to tilt the camera. Believe me, no self-respecting artist would ever take a straight selfie anymore-the greater the angle, the more artistic you'll be seen, so don't be afraid to go towards that 180, or even 360 degree rotation-with that type of selfie, you'll be greater than Michelangelo.

This may explain the recent flood of young daters to the world of dating apps. However, according to our local Tinder expert, Hotty Bigboy, this trend is accompanied by a misunderstanding on the part of many people. "Other young people, you know, just don't get it at first," says Mr. Bigboy. "I'm slowly starting to see a turnaround in users who know how to keep their profiles nice and appealing, but there is an epidemic of new users who copy others without understanding the proper reasoning and tactics for building their Tinder or Christen Mingle or WHATEVER account." To counteract this impending "epidemic", the Toike Oike therefore presents - How

Tip #2:
Get that shot where you're staring off into the distance, pondering life's deepest mysteries while really you're getting angrier and angrier while waiting for the picture to be taken and eventually start shouting at your friend

Dakota who means well but doesn't really know how to handle a camera. On the plus side, all that shouting gave you a sexy blush in your cheeks.

Tip #3:
Our expert Hotty Bigboy suggests taking a picture of yourself with a cute pet, to show off your extraordinary ability to love. Never mind your serious allergies to cats, this is love you're dealing with. In fact, every person needs pictures with at least five different animals, just to convince everyone that you have the capacity for sooooo much love. And make sure to keep 911 on speed-dial in case the cat scratches you. Getting hives is worth it for the ultimate pet selfie.

Tip #4:
Oh--my--god, how could you not have a shirtless picture yet?! You've got to show off those incredible biceps, those abs, that hot bod you've been saving up! However, make sure to pretend to cover them in an old T-shirt but take care that it doesn't actually do anything to hide them. And ladies, I'm talking to you too. We need true gender equality around here, so go snap that shirtless

MR. MOE MONET’S FINANCIAL ADVICE

TOIKE OIKE VENTURE CAPITALIST
B.S. IN ADVANCED ECONOMICS

Have you been together with your significant other for a while, but still haven’t had sex yet? Are your advances met with “I just need more time,” or something to that effect? Well, just remember: Time is money. That’s right, you can help your partner find all the time they need just by paying them!

Finding the correct amount can be tough. Not only do you want to avoid overpaying, but offering too much might seem desperate and it can apparently be a turn-off for some people.

Let’s start with “Someone that you are already sleeping with”. The kind of person you can say “A penny for your thoughts,” and they won’t even expect you to give them an actual penny. Considering the axiom “mind over matter”, thoughts must be inherently more valuable than one’s body. Although pennies no longer exist, a nickel should suffice for at least six consecutive sexual acts, possibly more if your partner is in a good nude, ahem, mood.

Next is that person in class who you asked to hang out with once and they brushed you off as “maybe later”. You’ve now resigned to giving embarrassed half-waves whenever you see them in the hopes that they’ll suddenly decide to ask you out. This one’s tricky because it depends on the individual. If they’re interested in research, you could make a posting looking for paid participants in a “hands-on” study, in which case you can probably get away with a couple of hundred dollars. Otherwise the safe bet is to offer to pay for their tuition for a year, which I have yet to see fail.

Lastly, we have the elusive “10/10”: that person you switch lecture sections just to have a glimpse of every now and then. The person who wouldn’t get with you “in a million years”. It’s here where we can apply the law of large numbers, where the amount of years in which they wouldn’t get with you is directly proportional to the amount of money that you have to give them. So “not in a million years” would translate to $1 million, which should be enough to convince them as well as rid them of any pre-existing significant others.

I hope that you found this advice illuminating, and it should make things a lot less awkward for engaging in future sexual activity moving forward.

Toronto Family Reports Bombardier Streetcar Sighting

Olly Swell
Toike Oike History Channel Buff

The Steer family made headlines this week after claiming to have evidence of a Bombardier streetcar in downtown Toronto. Following an alleged sighting near Yonge and Queen, Leyla Steer snapped a picture that she believes is proof of the vehicle’s existence.

“My husband and I never put much stock in the rumours about these streetcars,” said Leyla. “But since we went to the media, we’ve heard nearly a dozen other stories just like ours.”

The Bombardier streetcar, also known as the “Sasquatch”, is a cryptoautomotive phenomenon first sighted in late 2016. Since then, many Torontonians have become convinced that something is out there on the city streets.

In September of last year, one man even claimed to have boarded the streetcar, noting that the inside was frightfully new and that it smelled suspiciously unlike urine.

Reports on the number of Bombardier streetcars wandering downtown Toronto vary wildly, with some alleged experts estimating anywhere between 45 and 150. Meanwhile, these unreliable reports have lead transit authorities to advocate skepticism in spite of any purported evidence.

Largest Team Ever Qualified for 2018 Spookylympic Skeleton Races

Imma Goodlaydee
Toike Bone Enthusiast

The Toike Oike spoke with this year’s 24 member Skeleton team in this exclusive report. The team will be attending this year’s Spookylympics in Halloween City, much to the excitement of their fans.

With the 2018 Olympics just around the corner, Canada unveiled its largest Skeleton Team to ever attend the Games. It was a source of great pride not only for the team members, who were felicitated with great aplomb, but also for millions of their fans around the world, who are all but too well acquainted with the prowess of the Canadian Skeleton Team on the track.

The Spookylympics has a history of introducing games that push the bone-daries for what sport can be. Can anyone ever truly forget the remarkable, synchronised broomstick jive by the British witches in 2014? Or the mesmerising summoning rituals of unwitting teenagers on Instagram? The highlight this year, however, is going to be the team of 24 Canadian skeletons who have worked themselves to the bone to participate in the skeleton races.

Spookylympics fans would agree with Mr. Hekyll Jyde, chair of this year’s Spookylympic Committee, in saying that this year’s skeleton races promise more enthusiasm than ever before. “It’s going to be heart-in-mouth levels of excitement that we are anticipating”

Of course, the same can’t be said for our athletes. “The atmosphere here is of serenity and determination. We’re really going to get out there, and show the world what sort of guts we’ve got!” said two-time gold medallist, Richard “Dick” Bone.

Fans, of course, were incredibly excited about the larger cohort entering the races this year, “There is nobody, anywhere aroun’ the worl’, who can tell me that these people will not sweep the medals away. I mean look at ‘em! They’ve got the body, and they’re light on their toes... it’s perfect!”

It seems that, amongst Spookylympics fans, this year’s games promises to be the one that’ll bring home some bonne humeur!

“THIS. IS. JANUARY TOIIIIIIKE!”

By: Toike Pissant without a Single Feck

THIS IS CLEARLY JANUARY TOIKE. LOOK IT HAS JANUARY IN THE FIRST PAGE COLUMN THINGY AND EVERYTHING.

OK I HAVE NO LEGITIMATE ARGUMENTS AGAINST THAT SO I WILL NOW BE OUTRAGED WITHOUT LOGICAL TALKING POINTS. HOW DARE YOU.

vs “No, this is February Toike, you feckless pissant”

By: Toike 3X Wank-Off Champ

Hi, yes, I see your point - we pitched this Toike in January, we wrote this Toike in January, we edited this Toike in January, etc. But when was the Toike released? It is true, that this Toike was conceived in January - the seed that was to become this Toike was fertilised with our idea juice before February - but it did not gift us with its glorious presence until February. It was not printed until February, and it was not distributed until February. Like a child, do we not measure the Toike’s age from birth, not conception? We celebrate birthdays, not conception-days. Not to mention, all seven of our readers shan’t read this until February, so to the consumer, this is February Toike, not January Toike. To the reader, January Toike was Box Toike, which is also listed as the most recent Toike (January 2018) on the official website for the Paper. It is clear that this is February Toike, you feckless pissant.

Top 5 Kitchen Hacks With Sex Objects

Smart Multitasking for the 21st Century

Martha Stewart
Toike Oike Playtester Chef

Sex is a big industry. Each year, billions of dollars are spent on various paraphernalia, from birth control to BDSM. But since we’re already spending so much on getting it on, why should we have to buy new kitchen gadgets too? Save yourself a trip to Canadian Tire and go straight to your bedroom drawer for all the culinary equipment you’ll ever need.

1) Vibrator - Egg Beater

Omelettes can be a pain to make the old-fashioned way, beating them by hand. Why not put your Hitachi to good use after an intense romp in the bedroom to get some protein (gotta build those crotch muscles somehow!) and beat some eggs. With light, fluffy eggs, your taste buds will surely find breakfast to be very, very stimulating. You can also use it to beat all manner of batters, such as pancake batter, waffle batter and baby batter.

2) Condoms: Individually Wrapped Pickle Snacks

Do you ever go out and feel the sudden craving for a pickle, but are saddened to remember that you left all of yours in a jar at home? This is the innovation for you! Use anything from a regular to a magnum condom depending on the size of your pickle, and keep it on hand for whenever you want a burst of salty flavour in your mouth.

3) Ball Gag: Turkey Plug

Tired of the stuffing falling out of your turkey at Thanksgiving before it gets to the table? Take your sub’s ball gag (replace it with some duct tape so that they don’t get out of line) and use it to seal the cavity in your bird before serving so that none of the delicious stuffing or juices leak out. Also great for roast suckling pigs instead of the traditional apple-in-the-mouth! This also helps make a great statement piece for a family dinner to be remembered.

4) Flavoured Lubricant - Homemade Frappuccinos!

Instead of going out to Starbucks, make good use of your strawberry, vanilla, or bacon flavoured lube to customize your beverages in the comfort of your own home. Just blend coffee, ice, the creamy white substance of your choice, and a delicious lube in a blender and it’s ready to serve! As an added bonus, using lube will make your drink low-carb and help to clear out your digestive system better than fibre supplements ever could!

5) Butt Plug: Lemon Juicer
It turns out butt plugs are just the thing to juice lemons with. Shove it into the puckered, star-shaped hole in the middle of your lemon half and ram it in there; the bigger the better! Soon the sticky, sweet juices will be flowing down your fingers. Nothing is quite as refreshing! Life can be a pain in the ass, but here’s where the pain of lemons makes the pleasure of lemonade.

Man who Reads SexToike “Just for the Articles” Surprised by Actual Sex Stuff

SexToike has stirred readers with its vanguard content

Hew Heffer
Toike Rich Creepy Guy

A man who allegedly reads publications like Playboy “just for the articles” has been reported as “flabbergasted” by the actual sexual content in the SexToike. After casually retrieving and opening a Toike last Monday, Hank “Wank” McFeely was reportedly seen widening his eyes in seeming delight before immediately slamming the paper close and turning his head rapidly back and forth searching for witnesses to his apparently heinous deed. Upon realising that he was in the middle of the Pit, witnesses also attest to McFeely’s complexion transforming into a shade somewhere in the range of “beet-red” to “caught-with-his-penis-in-his-hands-crimson.”

“Woah. That was not what I was expecting,” stated McFeely to nobody in particular, after exaggeratingly pursing his lips and making the innocent-whistle-that-guilty-people-in-cartoons-make-after-being-guilty. When confronted with the information that the front cover of the paper clearly had “SexToike” emblazoned on it in prominent and unmissable font, McFeely defended himself by saying, “well for my...literary needs, I’ve always had high-class publications like Playboy and Sports Illustrated - Swimsuit Edition to satisfy my...intellect. It really surprised me that a paper like the Toike would have such great...articles.”

Despite not being questioned further, McFeely then launched into what appeared to be a rehearsed tirade about how Playboy has had articles written by literary luminaries like

Jack Kerouac and how Sports Illustrated has won the National Magazine Award for General Excellence.

McFeely was later seen buying fourteen jars of mayonnaise, three chocolate bars, and a loafah at a local Shoppers so that he would have other things to hand the cashier besides the five paper-bagged magazines that everyone knows he really came into the store for.

UTSU poll Shows Student Indifference at All-Time High

TORONTO, ON - Shocking reports out of the UTSU are indicating that the student population has stopped caring about whatever it is they do.

“I mean, yeah, last year we had a referendum, asking students if they would accept a $25 tuition hike to fund pizz-... textbooks,” said an unnamed member of the UTSU’s Finance Committee. “The thinking behind it was that those sheeple would just blindly click ‘yes’ and give us their money.”

The UTSU’s Annual Satisfaction Poll was conducted with the intention to gauge student opinion on the work performed by their student union over the course of the calendar year. Consisting of 43 questions such as “did you vote” and “are you still reading this help us we’re dead inside,” the survey offered the same 7 answers for every question, ranging from “heck ya” to “heck nah” with gender-neutral options such as “[gender-neutral] heck ya.” News of the survey was relayed to the student body as the postscript in a 1500-word email outlining the UTSU’s new anti-plastic-water-bottle campaign.

A 0.23% response rate among undergraduate students was the highest turnout of all 2018 polls issued by the UTSU, and the results were absolutely staggering. 100% of those surveyed responded “i dunno” for all the questions answered.

A Board of Director reached out, “The conclusion that we reached was that the student body just doesn’t know.”

Toike Oike Writer Wanders Off

Having previously decided to write an article for the Toike Oike, postmodern gender studies student Edward Yang soon wandered off and left the article unfinished. Much like the piece of toast he nibbled at for breakfast. Or that half-completed sign-thing at Harbord and Spadina.

Although initially dedicated to the task of writing, Yang was eventually distracted by something more interesting and left. He reportedly became frustrated with his task once it became apparent that he had started the first two paragraphs of his article with essentially the same sentence. As of yet, it has yet to be determined whether he wandered off mentally or physically. Or metaphorically. Or spiritually.

Furthermore, it is unclear what in particular Yang had set out to write in the first place. When eventually reached for comment all Yang had to say wa-

Skule Nite Review: Halftime show feat. Electric Nipple Tassles

“Can you tell them that I did a good job?”

- Daniel “Iceberg the Spiceberg” Charpentier

Katja Mews and Starburns
Toike Holistic Theorist and Toike Conspiracy Theorist

Last week, Skule Nite executives begged staff from the Toike Oike to watch an advance screening of the 3D version of the show. Overall, the show really lacked depth, mostly since the Toike Oike lost our 3D glasses in the Great Sandford Fleming Flood of 2018.

The fancy black tie dress code was a little surprising, especially considering that the theatre turned out to be in a grungy basement. As far as grungy basements go, this one had slightly fewer health code violations than that one bar. You know, the one in the basement.

Once we entered the theatre, we were impressed by the theatre-type things we found inside. The set was certainly structurally sound, and the costumes were costumed very professionally. The lights were blazing and the audience was present too, which was a nice touch.

It’s really wonderful to see such an established group of arts and science students come together to make a show, and be so inclusive to the few engineers involved with it. The best actor by far was engineering student Little Johnny, an eight-year-old all the way from Toronto, Ontario. Although he only had one convincing line (“track one, best one”), he stole the heart of the audience with his underwater mini-tuba solo.

Based on the promotional photos, I had the impression that Skule Nite was a modern retelling of Macbeth set in gangland Chicago, when it actually turned out to be a fresh take on Turkish oil wrestling. It was a surprise to be sure, but a welcome one.

The plot was a little too thick for my taste, but enjoyable nonetheless. I was surprised with the twist ending during the classic “Skule Nite Boss Fite”. Cast member Phtephen Stawe, playing the role of Barry Short, confronted the boss who was offering Short cookies to join his cult. Short accused the boss of killing his father, and I was completely S H O O K when the boss then unmasked himself and said, “No, Barry, I, Jonathan Swyers, am your father.”. I haven’t seen a twist ending like that since Star Wars!

If you like fireworks, acrobatics, and excessive anti-engsci jokes wrapped up in a Circus de Soleil-style show, you’ll love Skule Nite!

The show runs from March 14-17 at Hard Hat Theatre, and you can watch it if you like watching things.

65-Year-Old’s Net Worth, Sexual Potency Declining

Anakin Skywalker
Toike Fertility Expert

TORONTO, ON - Elderly marketing mogul Bartholomew “Barty” Sampson recently revealed that he has suffered a 7% decrease in net worth and penile length.

“Yeah, my wallet and genitals both took a real hit last quarter when our agency’s stock plummeted. Might have to sell the cottage.” Stated the suffering businessman.

Sampson’s company, Two In The Inc., was once, like his penis, a rising superstar in the creative world, rocketing to the top while running ads for Viagra, Cialis, Fleshlight, and Fisher-Price. He reached the climax of his career in 2010 when his company’s revenue exceeded CAD$100 million, and his sperm numbered in the billions.

Unfortunately for the hard-working Sudbury-native, his company posted 7 straight years of losses, and his penis experienced a 32% decrease in rigidity. Sampson also experienced a 1mL decrease in ejaculate.

“I’m just not into it anymore. I can’t seem to find the energy. My life is just... My joie de vivre is just gone. I just can’t get it up in the morning anymore, no matter how hard I try,” said the former millionaire and currently impotent senior.

At time of writing, Sampson was screaming at his penis and his stock portfolio in the hopes of improving their respective performances.

Tissue Box: “I’ve Seen Things”

Local tissue box speaks about horrors of living with a horny teenager

I. P. Errwhere
Toike Horny Teenager

In a press release last Friday, local tissue box Scott Kleenex opened up about his horrific experiences serving in a horny teenager’s room.

“I was assigned to his room when he was 18 and just starting engineering school,” began Scott. “I was stationed in one of the worst places on Earth: his computer desk.

“At first it didn’t seem so bad, and I tried to give him the benefit of the doubt. Just your average sneezing, runny nose, the occasional tears. But a few hours later, I understood why I was warned. Where all the scary stories came from.

“He started...loading and firing his cannon.” Scott held back tears, reaching for his tissues. But alas, they were all gone. The crowd soon found out where they all went.

“It was one thing to be directly facing him while he, umm, did the five knuckle shuffle. That was already enough to give me nightmares. But to see it over and over again, dozens of times per day... It did a number on me. Even when I thought he would take a break to study—he was an engineering student, for Christ’s sake!—he would take one look at his problem set and just give up. And go back to choking the chicken.

And then there was the porn. In the few weeks that I served him, I saw with my very own two eyes a downward spiral of depravity the likes of which I had never seen before. He went from eyesex, to buttole worship, to crudely drawn Sonic the Hedgehog porn that could only have come from borderline illegal parts of DeviantArt.”

After telling his story, Scott promoted his upcoming book, The Tissue Who Cried. Though he is all out of tissues, Scott says he now finds meaning in his life by advocating for workers’ rights for tissue boxes across Canada and sharing his story.

Most Glorious North Korean Hockey Team Leading Canadians 153-0 After First Period

This is a translation of an article from the North Korean magazine [REDACTED].

After not fielding any professional athletes for the 2018 Winter Olympics, the Canadian Hockey Team is at a disadvantage compared to the glorious North Korean team. The publication team here at [REDACTED] would like to remind you that Great Leader Kim Jong-Un is the best hockey player in the world; there is no team on Earth capable of defeating him.

NOTE: It has been confirmed by the Toike that Mr. Kim has not, in fact, been playing hockey.

Our Great Leader has announced that “Korea has no bad hockey players, only good ones. We cannot allow for the existence of bad Korean hockey players.”

NOTE: Many of North Korea’s hockey players were reported missing since the beginning of the 2018 Olympics.

Recently, both Glorious North Korea and Canada played their second game against each other. Most Glorious North Korean Hockey Team was leading against the Canadians 153-0 after the first period. This is similar to when Canada was struggling in their first game, with a score of 2-1 against the North Korea. North Korea is simply the best hockey team in existence after achieving such a magnificent lead in the first period. (This article was not written with a North Korean army guy beside the reporter).

Russian Semiconductor Physicists Banned from Olympics Following Doping Scandal

Shocking news hit the sporting community last week after the International Olympic Committee officially barred all Russian semiconductor physicists from participating in events at Seoul 2018. The IOC cited long-standing concerns over doping practices among the researchers. It is widely confirmed that dozens of Russians have practiced doping, introducing impurities into their crystal structures in order to better control the outcome of the competition.

Despite resistance from the Russian physics team and its numerous sponsors, Olympic officials have held firm and refused to conduct further negotiations. The current situation has left thousands of Russian fans disappointed and emotionally charged, while the IOC tries to diffuse the situation.

Indisputable evidence found in urine samples suggests the presence of pee-type doping in virtually every member of the team, and most officials suspect the use of n-type methods as well. For these reasons, the entire Russian team has been (valence) banned from the (electric) field.

Some experts have suggested that due to Moore’s Law, the amount of doping that can fit into one Olympics is likely to double every time the event is hosted, or approximately every two years. Others speculate that if this is indeed the case, the practice may simply be integrated into the Olympic circuit in the future.

Our Glorious EngSoc Officers Protects from Evils of the Flesh

Brothers and Sisters of the Toike! These are dark times for our newspaper! Look at these vile pages and realise the filth that abounds! Fornication and indulgentment. Impiety and malfeasance. Dildos and puns. These spawns of Satan have been packaged, oozing, into this abomination called SexToike.

Turn your gaze away from the lascivious hedonism that infects these decadent pages and listen to the truth! Yes the truth, I say, is that this once righteous paper has become contaminated by moral degradation. The Toike has descended into depravity and pornography, featuring such stains on the spirit as the sight of bare forearms and unchaperoned single women. Even, dare I say it, the implication of physical intimacy. The horror. The horror.

Yet fear not, dear readers, for all is not lost! The forces of purity and goodness have not only one, but five holy champions! Shining, unblemished, above the fetid swamps of lechery stand five knights, five guardians, five ever-wary, watchful protectors: Our Illustrious Lords and Saviours, the Effervescent, the Undying, the All-Seeing Engineering Society Officers (praise be upon them).

Lesser, foolish minds may call it “censorship”, but it is only through their infinite grace that your degeneracy is cleansed and your soul is absolved! Even the indecencies that permeates these papers are held at bay by their wisdom and foresight.

Know, oh devout reader, that it is they who save your virginal eyes (and other organs) from debauchery such as political things, bathroom things, and spooky things. Most of all, you have been protected from the supreme corruption of the wanton image of obscene human flesh. Indeed, it was only his eternal magnificence that guarded your innocent gaze this month from beholding the most evil sight of all in the Toike: the human mammary gland. The shuddering orbs, the fleshy sacks, the vulgar bags of sand.

Such salacious spheres shall never defile your sight while they remain vigilant.

So worry not, oh hallowed Toiker, your perfectly preserved chastity is safe. In the hands of our sublime guides, you are certain to never have to concern yourself with the crude carnality of the adulterated human body. Through their sanctified leadership, lustful lewdity shall be consigned to the darkness. Our Glorious EngSoc Officers will truly Make the Toike Great Again.

This article was originally intended for the December edition of the Toike Oike TORON-TOIKE, ON-TOIKE-IO - In a first for the University of Toronto-based satirical newspaper, a writer has submitted an article that accurately reflects the political climate and popular culture in January. Unfortunately for the anonymous contributor, their article will not be published until February, reducing the the once-poignant piece to nothing but an obscure reference.

“Oh yeah, no, I loved it. Thought it was hilarious,” said a Toike senior staff member, “can’t wait to release this in the next few months.”

Heralded for it’s dark humour, emotionally-moving themes, and clever observations, the article was dubbed “a must read” by the Toike leadership and was billed early-on as a potential frontpage piece before it was put aside for several weeks. Currently located in the electronic junkyard named “Toike Content for Later,” directly between the “Shitty Articles with OK Premises” and “trump_pumpkin_trumpkin.jpeg,” the well-written social commentary is drowning in the quagmire of forgotten writings.

“Yeah, man. We forget about a lot of our unused articles.”

Much to the chagrin of the unnamed writer, the January Toike is on newsstands this February-March.
